

Fulbright Says U2 Statements Badly Handled

Charges Lack of Coordination by Top Agencies

BY JACK BELL

Washington—(AP)—The chairman of the Senate committee probing the U2 spy plane incident says he's not satisfied there was effective coordination among top government agencies that handled the conflicting early statements about it.

Chairman J. William Fulbright (D-Ark.) said daylong opening testimony yesterday from Sec. of State Christian A. Herter and Undersecretary Douglas Dillon did not dispel his dissatisfaction with the way it was handled.

Republicans on Fulbright's foreign relations committee generally defended Herter's position that the spy flights were essential for the protection of the free world.

Lack of Coordination
Sen. Albert Gore (D-Tenn.) told reporters the testimony showed "an incredible lack of coordination" between the state department, the White House, the Central Intelligence Agency and other arms of the government involved.

In wide ranging testimony yesterday, Herter made the point that Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev had used the U2 plane incident as an excuse and not as the reason for breaking up the Paris meeting. But he conceded that the flight played a part in the summit failure.

Although Fulbright said the action was a mistake, Herter argued that if President Eisenhower had disclaimed responsibility for the U2 flight he would have fallen into a trap set by Khrushchev.

Anticipates Charge
Herter contended Khrushchev then would have charged that "a little frantic group in the Pentagon is running the government of the United States without the president knowing about it, and that makes our situation even worse."

Herter conceded, under questioning by Fulbright, that it was unprecedented for a head of state to take personal responsibility for espionage activity. But he said the circumstances of the downing of the U2 were unusual.

He said the original plan to be followed if a U2 plane was captured was to deny its spy mission and stick to the denial. But he said the circumstances "turned out to be rather different than anything that had been anticipated."

Japanese Soldiers to End of War

Japan—(AP)—Officially ended 16 years of war here today as Japanese soldiers and civilians were told to return home.

It was so filled with emotion he had difficulty speaking. His eyes brimmed with tears as he related how they lived. Minagawa also told of how "we ate roots, worms, grass and grasshoppers. It's no use telling you because you wouldn't believe it. You can't imagine such a life."

Although they had exchanged their tattered rags for neat clothes, the men were obviously dazed, often apparently unaware that they were speaking simultaneously. "I'm all confused," said Ito.

They were among the survivors of some 20,000 Japanese troops believed to have died to the last man in a Banzai charge in 1944. But 600 were taken prisoner by the Americans and repatriated.

Eight stragglers were found in 1951 and sent home. "I don't think there are any more left," said Minagawa.

When asked by a reporter whether they had seen leaflets written by their relatives and dropped by helicopter over the jungle several years ago, they said, "Yes, but we didn't believe them. We thought it was propaganda."

Life Slowly Returns To Normal in Turkey

Military Junta Moves to Get New Constitution for Nation, May Put Menderes on Trial

BY GARVEN MUDGINS

Istanbul, Turkey—(AP)—Life gradually returned to normal in Turkey today under the watchful eye of a ruling military junta which toppled the government of Adnan Menderes and threatened to put the dictator on trial.

Gursel
Troops guarded banks and other important buildings throughout the country, but otherwise there were few outward signs that Turkey was under direct military rule.

Moves Swiftly
Gen. Cemal Gursel's revolutionary "Turkish National Union committee" moved swiftly, however, to set the wheels in motion again.

The junta, which has promised new elections soon to set up a democratic state, named a board of educators and jurists to write a new constitution. It also ordered Dean Siddik Omar of Istanbul university flown to Ankara, reportedly to form a provisional government.

The junta promised that Turkey's military alliance with the United States would remain intact.

There was jubilation in the nation's press and among students as they resumed university and college classes suspended earlier this week by Menderes.

Gursel, 65-year-old junta leader, continued moves to abolish restrictions Menderes had clamped on Turkish newspapers. Nine journalists were released from prison where they have been serving terms for "tendentious" criticism of the Menderes government.

World Reaction
A leading British newspaper called on the United States today to use its influence to ensure that Turkey's new military junta keeps its promise to hold free elections soon.

The call came from the liberal News Chronicle as the revolt that ousted Menderes won guarded approval in the first worldwide newspaper reaction. Turkey's allies were cautiously awaiting developments before making any official comment.

Moscow radio reported the coup in broadcasts beamed abroad, but no mention of it was heard on the Russian home service. Moscow said military expenditures had led to "inflation, a recession in business activity and the impoverishment of the popular masses" in Turkey. The broadcasts added it would be in Turkey's national interests if that country freed herself of obligations to military and political blocs.

Neighbor Speaks
Iraq's Premier Abdel Karim Kassam, who won power two years ago in a military coup, told a news conference in Baghdad the revolt in Turkey will result in stability and democracy.

The South Korean press welcomed the coup in Turkey and expressed hope it would succeed in realizing a democratic revolution.

Montgomery Silent on His Visit to Red China
Hong Kong—(AP)—Britain's Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery, 72, came out of communist China today but showed an unusual reluctance to talk about his "red carpet" tour right away.

"I have crossed the bridge. I am back—undamaged," Montgomery said as he shook hands with British officials who greeted him on the Lowu bridge, a border station between communist China and Hong Kong.

According to reports from Peiping, Montgomery spoke out there in support of communist China's claim that Formosa is part of China and he invited Chou to England as his "private guest."

Legislature Quits Among Name-Calling
Longest Session in State's History Ends On Park Fee Dispute

Madison—(AP)—Wisconsin's 1959 legislature adjourned Friday night on a round of political name-calling that characterized the longest legislative session in the state's history.

Rejection of an annual $2 automobile sticker fee for state park users touched off the fireworks in the Republican-controlled senate.

The political crossfire continued for almost 20 minutes and delayed the elusive final adjournment until 9:05 p. m., almost 90 minutes after the Democratic-controlled assembly had called it quits.

Real Dispute
It became increasingly apparent during the session's closing hours that the park sticker plan had the makings of a final explosive dispute. But no one could have been braced for the jolt it did unleash.

The park sticker plan was tacked to a proposed revision in the conservation budget, a $30 million spending measure approved earlier in the session.

The Democratic administration proposed to change the measure's line-by-line accounting to a program budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1. Dissenters claimed the change would hamstring the commission by foreclosing its right to shift funds.

OK Beer
Last-minute legislative approval was gained for a Senate bill to permit breweries and distributors to sponsor radio and television broadcasts and to purchase advertising supporting the Milwaukee Braves, Green Bay Packers and other professional athletic clubs.

Thousands Homeless
71 Die as Monsoon Causes Manila Flood

Manila—(AP)—Seventy-one persons were counted dead and thousands were homeless today as flash floods triggered by monsoon rains hit the Manila area and left half the capital city under water.

Army and police authorities reported 22 deaths each in Manila and neighboring Quezon City and 27 in other suburbs. A rise in the toll is expected as flood waters recede.

Communication lines were snarled, making an immediate firm estimate of destruction impossible. But losses were certain to soar past the million-dollar mark.

Manila, a city of two million, was virtually paralyzed. Transportation was at a standstill, commercial districts were deserted and most shops and theaters were closed. Reports from the suburbs said dead bodies were seen floating down flood-swollen rivers. Other accounts told of houses ripped down from their foundations and sent swirling down streets where some collided with stalled cars and trucks.

The monsoon swept in without warning Friday in the wake of tropical storm Lucille that sideswiped Manila earlier. Monsoon rains—nine inches, the weather bureau said—and wind of gale proportions battered the city without letup until early morning, toppling trees and billboards and ripping telephone lines.

The water in Manila's crowded tenement districts, where most of the city's deaths occurred, rose to six feet. Many of the victims there were children caught in flimsy shacks crumpled by the floods.

U. S. Called Peace Enemy

United Nations, N. Y.—(AP)—Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko today called the United States an enemy of peace, dedicated to aggravating world tensions and not to be trusted in diplomatic negotiations.

Gromyko said the Soviet Union could not regard the U. S. government as reliable. He said further that the United States wanted to negotiate only as a smoke screen to cover its unwillingness to relax world tensions.

Gromyko also blasted the United States for its plan to send 120 fighter planes to southeast Asia for training exercises. He further warned Japan against permitting its bases to be used for any U. S. flights over Red China.

3-Hour Speech Ranges From Golf to Unprecedented Top Ruler Discussion

BY PRESTON GROVER

Moscow—(AP)—Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev said today he believes President Eisenhower wants peace, but "The road to hell is paved with good intentions and he will really get there." U. S. military circles he described as opposed to peace.

"Everybody knows that the president of the United States has two duties: The first is to play golf and the second is to be president, and golf-playing is more important," Khrushchev said.

He declared the Americans need to be "taken down a peg or two."

'Shock Worker'
The Soviet leader reported to the Soviet nation by radio and TV, in a speech delivered before a meeting of Communist Labor Brigade leaders in the Kremlin, on the failure of the Paris summit conference and related world affairs. The delegates unanimously acclaimed him as the "Foremost Shock Worker of Communist Labor."

Air Force Task Flight
120-Plane Group Will Show Ability To Deploy Quickly

Washington—(AP)—A 120-plane air force group, including tactical jet fighters, troop carriers and tankers, flies to the Far East next week in what Pentagon spokesmen call a training exercise.

Leaving from California Wednesday, they will visit the Philippines, Thailand and Formosa. A return flight to the United States is scheduled about 15 days later.

Asked by the reporters yesterday about the timing of the operation in view of current international tensions, a defense department spokesman consulted with superiors and then replied "It has been planned for at least six months."

Test Ability
The formal announcement by Gen. Thomas D. White, air force chief of staff, said only that the flight was an exercise to test the ability of the tactical air force to deploy over long distances quickly if faced by an emergency.

Training will start immediately after the planes reach the Philippines and will be under the direction of the 13th air force. The strike force will be under command of Maj. Gen. Henry V. H. Johnson, commander of the 19th air force with headquarters at Seymour Johnson AF Base, N.C.

At the invitation of Thailand, the air force said, the planes going on to that nation will conduct training operations from Don Muang airfield. En route from the Philippines the flight planes will be fueled from aerial tankers. Reconnaissance planes, troop planes, troop carriers and some cargo planes from the 35th air division in Japan will join the U. S. based super Sabre fighters and other aircraft in the flight to Thailand.

centennial of St. Nicholas. A class of young people will receive confirmation and the parish's new 5-room school addition will be dedicated.

The celebration started last Sunday when a centennial homecoming was conducted. During the 10 a. m. mass said by the Rev. Alfred Hietpas, pastor, 1960 graduates of the parish school received their diplomas.

The School Sisters of Notre Dame of the parish faculty on Thursday served a tea for other members of the sisterhood in the diocese.

Participating Clergy
Celebrant of the Mass Tuesday will be the Rev. Earl Schuh, a son of the parish. Deacon and subdeacon will be the Revs. James Geenen and William Rickert, sons of the parish. Masters of ceremonies will be the Rev. Donald Verhagen, another son of the parish, and the Rev. Gordon Gilsdorf, parish weekend assistant.

Assisting the bishop will be the Very Rev. Adam Grill, dean of Outagamie county, and the Rev. Raymond Hietpas, cousin of the present pastor and the immediate past former pastor.

Bishop Bona will preach the sermon and the diocese's priests' choir will sing. It is also expected Abbot Killeen, O. Praem., 10 monsignori and more than 100 other religious of the diocese will be present.

First Pastor
The Rev. Gerard Spierings, O. F. M. Cap., was the first resident pastor. He arrived in Freedom in June, 1860, but the first settlers were in the area before 1848. They were Yankee Protestants.

On Nov. 17, 1846, Peter Jacob July, a Catholic, applied for land patent for what is now the southern part of the village of Freedom. In 1847 and 1848, European Catholics began to immigrate and turned to the church at Little Chute. The first mass at Freedom was celebrated in the home of John Sanders and later at the homes of Nicholas July and John Hermes.

In 1851, the Rev. Hubert Nuyts took up temporary residence in the Sanders home and started a frame church on the present church site. On Oct. 13, 1851, Nicholas July and his wife donated five acres for the Freedom Catholic parish.

Cut Timber
When Father Nuyts left in 1852, the Freedom Catholics continued to be served by the Little Chute priests until Father Spierings arrived.

There was no saw mill at Freedom and the men of the parish hand sawed timbers for the rectory and used until 1884.

Father Van' Luytelaar came in October, 1864, and in 1865 opened the first school, but it was soon closed because of opposition and poverty. However, he was able to start construction of a church before he left in 1868. His successors, Father Verberk and Father Wilkins, both worked on finishing construction.

Freedom Church to Fete Centennial

First Pastor Anniversary, Bishop To Confirm, Dedicate New School

BY MRS. WELDON HUSS

Freedom — A triple occasion will be marked at St. Nicholas Catholic church Tuesday when the Most Rev. Stanislaus V. Bona, bishop of the Green Bay diocese, occupies the throne.

A mass of thanksgiving at 11 a.m. will commemorate the centennial of the first resident pastor of St. Nicholas. A class of young people will receive confirmation and the parish's new 5-room school addition will be dedicated.

The celebration started last Sunday when a centennial homecoming was conducted. During the 10 a.m. mass said by the Rev. Alfred Hietpas, pastor, 1960 graduates of the parish school received their diplomas.

Duck Creek and Freedom from 1860 and 1870, completed the church and liquidated the debt, even leaving a sum in the treasury. Father Versteeg completed the church by raising the steeple and placed a stone marker above the door bearing the date of completion.

Sisters Arrive
He also saw to the construction of a brick school house and placed it under the direction of the School Sisters of Notre Dame on Oct. 21, 1870. It is believed the dedication of this school was the occasion of the first confirmation service in the parish. It was performed by Bishop Krautbauer.

Another parish, St. Mary, was formed in West Freedom at this time, but it did not become a part of the St. Nicholas mission until 1891. Father Versteeg left in 1882.

In 1882 Father Lochman arrived and during his eight years as pastor he made considerable improvements to the church, constructed the present rectory, added a second story to the school and built the sisters' home.

Mission Church
Father Lochman and Gerard Van Susteren, manager of the general store, made contact with the Indians on the Oneida reservation and became instrumental in the formation of Immaculate Conception mission church.

Father Selbach was his successor and he made additional improvements and modernization in the parish buildings. In 1895 the parishioners erected a chapel in the cemetery.

In 1896, trouble arose over the fact St. Nicholas school was both a parochial and district school and the parishioners decided to continue it strictly as a private and parochial institution. That same year, the church was enlarged to accommodate the growing parish. Father Selbach left in 1900.

Expand Facilities
After several short pastorates, Father Van Heyster arrived in 1901. Enlargements were made in the convent and school. He was succeeded in 1916 by Father Peters.

While the parish was planning to expand the church to accommodate 900 worshippers, the church burned in July 1917, and the present fireproof structure was erected and dedicated July 1, 1919.

In 1926, Father Peters started the longest pastorate at St. Nicholas, 24 years. He set aside $37,000 and was planning a new school when he died in 1950.

Other Improvements
He was succeeded by the Rev. James Kools, who carried forward his plans for a combination convent and 8-room school which was completed for about $250,000 and dedicated by Bishop Bona on May 31, 1953.

Father Raymond Hietpas came in 1955 and reduced the school debt to $87,500 before he was succeeded by his cousin Father Alfred Hietpas on Sept. 4, 1957, and further improvements were made to the church facilities.

In 1959, plans were started for an addition to the school, and it was completed in April.

Remove Cause And Stomach Ulcers Heal Naturally
Some of the first indications of ulcers of the stomach are feeling of distention, gas pains, and indigestion. As the ulcers progress dull pains are felt especially while the stomach is empty. In some mild forms the pain may be absent.

Wrong eating habits, fatigue, and nervousness are contributing factors in the formation of ulcers. The underlying cause is the interference with the nerves controlling glandular secretions such as hydrochloric acid and the digestive juices. If it were not for this very delicate mechanism balancing glandular secretions the stomach would digest itself. It is only the spots where the nerve action to the glands is deficient that digestion of this type occurs.

Chiropractic adjustments remove the underlying cause of ulcers making possible healing and recovery from within.

Baptist Convention

National Council of Churches May Draw Some Lively Discussion

BY TOM HENSHAW

AP Religion Writer

The National Council of Churches may draw some lively discussion again next week at the annual conference of the American Baptist convention.

Dissident groups, led by one of the largest congregations in the denomination, promise to make a strong effort to pull the 1½ million-member convention out of the council. Their chances: Not very good.

The movement carries overtones of the recent air force manual squabble in which the NCC was accused of harboring communist influences within its ranks. The manual has been withdrawn.

Withdraw Support

Leader in the session movement is the 4,300-member First Baptist church of Wichita, Kan., which last March voted to withdraw financial support — about $30,000 a year — from the convention "because of its affiliation with the national council."

Prior to the American Baptist meetings, which begin next Thursday in Rochester, N. Y., a committee of Wichita deacons and a special convention committee will meet to discuss the matter.

"I don't anticipate any action terminating our relationship with the national council," says the Rev. W. Hubert Porter, associate general secretary of the ABC, in New York.

Yearly Resolution

"But," he adds, "when you get a group of free delegates together one takes a risk in assuming too much assurance about what will happen."

Every year for the last 12 years some resolution concerning ABC relations with the NCC has reached the conference floor, and each time delegates have voted to reaffirm participation in council activities.

"If there is a vote against the National Council this year it will reverse every historic trend," says the Rev. Mr. Porter.

Provides Out

A spokesman for the NCC said he didn't think the council "should comment on a resolution that a Baptist congregation is trying to present to a Baptist convention."

The American Baptist convention provides an out for its member churches who want nothing to do with the NCC. They may designate that the funds they contribute to the convention are not to be used directly to support the council.

Skills Developed in Working With Wood, Metal, Printing

BY BONNIE BARSTOW
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

The sounds of saws, hammers, power lathes, printing presses, a linotype, drills and other machines hum through a 1-story wing at the back of Appleton High school. This is the school's industrial education department, where young people are learning to be both tradesmen and wise consumers.

Woodworking, metal working, printing, drawing and auto mechanics courses are offered by the high school. All are elective courses, and a student may take no more than two at a time.

This year for the first time juniors can take a semester course in woodworking. Here they learn basic care and proper use of hand tools. They can put their talents to use by constructing one of a choice of four small projects—a lawn chair, step table, serving cart or gun rack.

Each year course is a prerequisite for the one following, and Armin Gerhardt, printing teacher, says that each year the class reduces to about half. There are now about 96 sophomores, 48 juniors and 21 seniors studying printing.

Sophomores begin to learn the trade by setting type by hand. They lock up the type forms and use a proof press to get samples of their work.

As juniors they can use the two small platen presses in the shop, learn the fundamentals of layout and learn to use the saw and miter machine. Each year, seven juniors are selected to learn to operate the linotype machine.

Learn Rules

The juniors spend four weeks learning correct procedures and safety rules. The band saw and the grinder are the only machine tools they use.

In senior cabinet making the students go on to more complicated projects and procedures. In this class they choose their own projects with the guidance of Roger Kerstner, their instructor. Students have made such things as desks, colonial gun cabinets, room divider cabinets, occasional chairs and water skis.

Student Projects

The senior course is production printing in which the class members are divided among all the class hours to work on school publications and job work. The students using the cylinder press as well as the platen presses print the "Futures" booklet distributed each year to city ninth graders, the AHS student directory and the school literary annual, "Patterns of Star Dust." They also print school forms and programs about 25,000 tickets a year and the monthly school calendar.

The student directory, a 48-page book, is not as much work as it may at first seem. Each year, type for the names, addresses and telephone numbers of sophomores and juniors is saved to be used for the junior and senior sections of the following year. Only changes of addresses and numbers, new students and sophomores have to be set for each edition of the book.

The drawing room has space for 30 students at a time. Four different drawing courses are offered in the three years—mechanical drawing for sophomores, machine drawing for juniors and architectural and engineering drawing for seniors. Engineering drawing is a year course, the others are each a semester.

Basic Drawing

In mechanical drawing the students learn basic drawing processes and theories and learn to use the equipment. Machine drawing involves machine design, charts, graphs, identification drawings, isometric tracing and blue print making. The juniors also are asked to invent and draw a lock.

In architectural drawing the students plan houses and small commercial buildings.

Engineering drawing, offered for the first time this year, is "tailored to the needs of the student who plans to major in engineering in college," explains the AHS student handbook. "It acquaints him with the tools, techniques, theories and processes involved in drafting,

118 Enrolled

This semester, 48 students are enrolled in junior wood working and 70 in senior cabinet making.

In metal working, the school offers two semester courses, one for juniors and one for seniors. Myron Seims is the teacher.

Students in junior iron class make simple tools, such as hammers, metal and plastic handled screwdrivers, wrenches and fish gaffs. In the senior course, they learn more technical aspects of the subject, and as a project make a vise.

Tools in the metal shop include lathes, a power metal cutting band saw, drill press, vises, a shaper and soldering equipment. Acetylene gas and electric welders are there for repair work, but students ordinarily do not learn to use these.

Because of the limited space, classes in metal are limited to 24 each. Two junior and one senior classes this semester are filled to capacity.

Printing Courses

Three full years of printing courses are offered at AHS.

Designer of U. S. Flag Shrouded in Mystery

Protocol of Handling, Displaying Standard Is Evidence of Respect

BY DAVID SCHAEFER
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

The identity of the man or woman who made one of the most outstanding contributions to American patriotism and the American nation as a whole, may never be known.

The name of the person who gave America its flag—the designer of the original national symbol of 13 stars and 13 stripes—remains shrouded in legend.

Documentary proof has never been found to establish as fact the story that Betsy Ross designed the flag that was adopted by the second Continental congress on June 14, 1777, in Philadelphia.

Betsy Ross legend. At that time the country's founders passed a resolution saying "Resolved, that the flag of the United States be 13 stripes, alternate red and white; that the union be 13 stars, white in a blue field representing a new constellation."

The legend that Mrs. Betsy Ross designed it originated with her grandson who in 1870 made public the story that Mrs. Ross was commissioned to design it by George Washington, Benjamin Franklin and George Ross, an uncle.

No record or evidence has ever been found to verify the story, although it has become a part of American history.

Displaying Flag. At the risk of being brutal with individuals' romantic ideas about the Revolutionary war, historians also say there is no evidence that the stars and stripes ever flew during a Revolutionary battle.

As the flag has evolved to its present form of 50 stars and 13 stripes, it has naturally grown in tradition and esteem not only to Americans, but to all nations.

The traditional protocol in handling and displaying the flag, has remained basically the same throughout the years.

Sunrise to Sunset. Although there are no penalties for not doing so, the flag should be flown on all legal holidays and on special occasions designated by the president, governors or other authorities. It also should be displayed on official buildings, when in use, at polling places on election day and on or in front of schools when they are in session.

The flag is customarily flown from sunrise to sunset, but not in stormy weather. There is no law prohibiting a citizen from flying a flag at any time.

It should be raised and lowered carefully, without touching the ground. When hung over a sidewalk on a rope, the union should be away from the building and it should be hung flat not draped. No other national flags may be flown above it or to the right of it.

Saluting Flag. Whenever the flag is displayed.

Building Permits for Home Additions Issued.

Kaukauna — Two building permits for home additions and one for a new garage were issued Friday by Lohar Kemp, building inspector. William Robach, Jr., 1117 Lawe street, will construct an addition to his home at a cost of $1,000 and a $3,000 home addition will be built by William Rogers, 1317 Hillcrest drive. Jack Staley, 803 Boyd avenue, will build a 2-car garage at an estimated cost of $1,700.

Village Memorial Day Fete Will Receive Special Recognition

Little Chute Legionnaires Have Record Participation to Honor Departed Veterans which is the language of engineering and industry."

The prerequisite for engineering drawing is advanced mathematics, rather than other industrial arts courses. The student must be taking or have completed third year math.

Engineering drawing students begin with basic sketching as do the sophomores in mechanical drawing. But they rapidly move into more intricate forms of description, and are introduced to blueprinting and industrial processes.

Book Work

When they enter engineering colleges next fall these students "should be well ahead of other class members," predicts Owen Reppert, the drawing teacher.

Auto mechanics a semester course, involves mainly book work. The classroom has two model engines and an auto transmission to supplement the book learning.

And, of course, many teenagers have auto mechanics laboratories in their own family garages. The fact that so many teach themselves, industrial arts teachers comment, may be one reason why there is only two auto mechanics classes now, although there have been semesters when three such classes have been taught.

Electricity and eventually some electronics may be taught to future Appleton High school classes, the industrial arts teachers predict, as the department changes to keep pace with changes in technology and labor demands.

Little Chute — The eyes of the Fox Cities and the state will be on this village Monday as members of the Jacob Copius American Legion post turn out to pay their respects to departed servicemen in the annual Memorial Day observance.

Crowds estimated at 5,000 have jammed village streets to see the evening parade and hear the guest speakers pay tribute to deceased veterans at cemetery ceremonies. Although the day is climaxed by the huge parade Legion members pay tribute throughout the day.

Evening Program. A memorial mass will be read at 7:50 a.m. at St. John's Catholic church. Legion members will assemble at the village hall and march to the church in a body to attend the services. At 9 a.m. the color guard, firing squad and a delegation of Legionnaires will visit the cemetery at Combined Locks where a salute will be fired and tribute paid veterans of that community.

Guest speaker for services at the cemetery will be Douglas Davenport, New Lisbon past state commander. Units participating in the parade will be army veterans in uniform, an army firing squad, navy veterans in uniform, a navy firing squad, air force veterans in uniform, marine veterans in uniform, World Wars I and II veterans without uniforms and Legion auxiliary members.

Other marching units will be the Legion auxiliary juniors, Drum and Bugle corps, Baton Twirling corps, Village band, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Cub Scouts and Explorer Scouts. Gold Star parents will ride in cars along with disabled veterans, village officials, guest dignitaries and the speaker.

Martin Jansen, first vice commander of the Legion will serve as master of ceremonies as Ronald Geiger, Legion commander, has laryngitis. Ervin Van Dyke, ninth district commander elect, will introduce guests. The Rev. Martin Vosbeek, pastor of St. John's parish, will give the invocation.

The Kaukauna Little Chute SPEBSQSA will sing, "Sleep Soldier Sleep" and taps will be sounded by Clarence Peele's Marching units are to assemble at the ballpark at 6 p.m. and begin the march at 6:30 p.m. The route will be south on Madison to Main, east on Main to the cemetery. After services the route will be west on Main to Depot, north on Depot to the American Legion park for flag lowering ceremonies.

Automobile parking will be permitted along the parade route except in the vicinity of the cemetery. Members of the parade committee are Jack Metz, Roger Koehn and Carl Hammen.

Hearing Set on Village Water Plant Project

PSC to Air Kimberly Request Ordering Locks to Build Plant

Kimberly — The public service commission will hold a hearing at the Outagamie county courthouse at 9 a.m. Wednesday on the request from Kimberly to have Combined Locks build its own water system.

Kimberly requested the commission to order Combined Locks to build its own system, pointing to the growth of that community and the inadequacy of the present Kimberly system to service both villages.

The Kimberly water commission indicated present facilities are adequate for several years for Kimberly alone but a major rebuilding program would be necessary if it must continue to provide service to Combined Locks.

In warm summer months water pressure is lowered considerably and in event of a major fire in one or both communities, a problem might arise, according to the commission. Kimberly was unable to get a definite answer from Combined Locks on whether that village contemplated building its own system, thus the request was made to the PSC.

Combined Locks engineers have prepared preliminary figures and a tentative site for a well should the village build its own system and pointed out the indebtedness incurred by building could be retired through profits from the utility.

T. H. Boebel Feted at Party

Retiring School Head Honored by Teachers, Friends and Guests

Kaukauna — Approximately 75 teachers and friends gathered for a dinner party at the Hotel Appleton recently to pay tribute to T. H. Boebel, superintendent of schools, who will retire July 1.

Special guests besides Mr. and Mrs. Boebel were Mr. and Mrs. Ray Peters Wausau, the couple's daughter and son-in-law and Mr. and Mrs. Russell Lewis, a lifelong friend of the Boebels, as first assistant superintendent of instruction for the state.

Serving as master of ceremonies was Clarence Baumgartner, Kaukauna Education association president. Lewis and teachers praised Boebel for his work and record in the educational field over the years and Kaukauna teachers presented him with a stereo-phonograph. Boebel expressed his appreciation for the gift words of tribute and the kindness of those present.

Retired teachers returning for the party were Miss Lottie McCarty, Miss Rose Phillips and Mrs. John Vandeloo while Miss Sally Hoeltz, Green Bay, formerly teacher in Kaukauna, was also present.

Theater Loses Mainstay In Critic's Retirement

Brooks Atkinson Holds Unique Position
On Assignment That Draws Much Abuse

BY JINGO
Broadway — indeed the entire American stage — is losing one of its mainstays; not an angel nor a leading lady nor a producer. Broadway's loss next month will be the dean of its critics, Brooks Atkinson of the New York Times.

Critics are strange creatures in the eyes of the public and the members of the institution being criticized. But they are no stranger than what they really are — newspapermen, which, perhaps, is strange enough.

Atkinson is considered something of a critic's critic. True, he hit the big time as a critic and made good after a melodramatic chance and grew in the job until he became a legend. So unique did his position become that the theater honored him with a party.

Nevertheless, Atkinson was always a newspaperman and he proved it during World War II by taking a precarious assignment to the big show itself.

Perhaps no beat on a paper holds as much intriguing possibility as the theater beat — free tickets aside. No matter what is written there is someone who will without provocation heatedly take exception because unlike any other beat, the critic writes his opinions as an integral part of his reportorial assignment.

Despite his comfortable seat in the best part of the house, the critic is really sitting out on a limb. But the critic can take the abuse and little understanding because he knows he's a part of something he loves, playing a role as necessary and old as the theater itself.

Attention Polka Fans! The dean of polka bands is coming this way again, the first time since he celebrated his golden anniversary in the business two years ago. Whoopee John will be at the Cinderella on Sunday. It is said it will be his only stop in the Fox Cities.

Following hot on Whoopee's heels will be the ever-popular Frankie Yankovitch next Sunday at the same stand.

When the Democrats draw their battle lines on the west coast, CBS-TV will let loose its first and only television newsman, Nancy Hanschman. The local kick to this blurb is that Nancy is a Badger, born in Wauwatosa and trained at the University of Wisconsin. She apparently knows her way around politicians. For three years she was a staff assistant to the senate committee on foreign relations.

Next Friday, Person to Person will visit the queen of jazz vocalists, Ella Fitzgerald. The flip side of the show will be Robert Stack, Emmy nominee for his work in the untouchables series.

Death Valley Days next month will air a strange story for a show by that name. It will relate how 12 barrels of trout were brought into eastern Nevada to stock the stream there. Shootin' irons heated by the omnipresent triangle mess up the affair a bit, of course.

A widely ranging anthology of theatrical music will be the fare Wednesday on ABC's Music for a Spring night, with Kitty Carlisle as the star.

Anyone out there ever meet, greet or come close to Winston Churchill? Producers of a proposed ABC series are looking for you. Let us know and we'll pass the word along.

Wife Should Cry to Make Husband Retire

BY THOMAS COLLINS
"My husband," the lady said, "can retire next year at age 60. If he did so, we would have $178 from his premature pension and an average of $40 from investments."

"We own our home, which is worth probably $18,000, but still owe roughly $4,000 on the mortgage."

"I want my husband to quit at age 60. He is getting too old too fast. I can make him do it if I cry. I need the answers to two questions before I cry."

"The first question is: Is there enough money for us to do it? The second question is: Could I possibly be doing my husband an injustice by forcing him to retire at this age?"

"If you answer yes to the first and no to the second, I will start crying tomorrow."

Start Crying
This lady — who is in pretty much the same position many other wives are in — ought to start crying.

The $220-odd income would support this couple comfortably in many of the retirement areas of the South. If they sold their house and got out from under their mortgage, they could invest their $14,000 net at 4 per cent and get about $45 a month more in income. Better yet they could sell their house, buy a $10,000 cottage in the South, and live in plenty.

The more significant question in the mind of this woman is the second one. Should a wife encourage a husband to retire from his job before he has to? The impulsive answer is that the job is his business, not hers. The responsibility of maintaining the stability of the marriage and the home is his business, not hers. So why doesn't she keep her fingers out of his affairs?

But impulsiveness is not really the answer. Prisoner of Job
A man who has worked himself into a good job by age 60, as this man apparently has, is actually a prisoner of the job. Usually he is blind to anything except to try harder and harder to work more and more and never to give up. If his health is waning, if his compatibility with his wife and the outside world is fading away, if this is about his last chance to reach up and grasp a piece of free life — he would never know it. His wife would. The wife, in her good sense and compassion, should tell him to quit if she finds reason to and should cry if she must.

There are many luscious grapes to pluck in the vineyard that lies outside the business office. . . . with variety enough to tempt the palate of almost any man. It seems to me that a successful businessman could reap a beautiful harvest by passing on his knowledge to the students of some quiet university. Not as a dean or as a professor, and by design not as anybody important, but as a simple man with something to give.

It seems also that a successful businessman — who has lived his days by the pattern which the business world sets — could break the pattern and find some rare happiness. He could work behind the counter of a crossroads country store selling crackers and cheese, go to church on Sunday and do his bit, get acquainted with people who aren't knocking themselves out. And discover a world he doesn't even know exists.

As a general rule, businessmen who are retired at age 65, with or without money, are not finding life very sweet. So I see no reason to risk a heart attack and lose five years of freedom to attain it if a man doesn't have to.

Niagara Cites Doctor's Article on Advertising

A recent article by Joseph Kaselow has been recommended by Niagara Cyclo Massage, local store which is located at Valley Fair Shopping center. The article from a New York paper is quoted as following:

"A new breed of doctor may emerge from the current furor over drug advertising-promotion practices. He'll doff the surgical gown and don the grey flannel. This is prompted by a talk we had the other day with Dr. John R. Mote, an independent medical consultant and supervisor of many research projects in the health and drug field. Dr. Mote predicted that within the next 10 years every advertising agency with clients in the health field will have either a staff M.D. or a consultant working with it.

"But in addition to knowing a tibia from fibula he'll have to have a working knowledge of federal laws, copywriting, sales training and the ability to interpret available facts for advertising use. In other words he will have to be a physician who has imagination enough to interpret and integrate the various facets of advertising and promotion from a technical viewpoint.

"The need for more medical men in agencies has resulted from the tightening up of Federal laws and a greater awareness on the part of agencies of their responsibility to the public, as well as clients, in such matters, Dr. Mote said.

"However, he went on, some agencies and their clients have not yet learned that despite the fact that products may appear similar, they cannot transfer the claims of one product to another without adequate medical research. This was borne out last year when the government cited twenty-seven companies in the vibratory massage field for making unsubstantiated health claims, he pointed out.

"One of my clients, Niagara Therapy Corp., which makes cyclo-massage equipment, spent considerable sums of money supporting research over two years. This was followed by publication of the results in the 'Archives of Physical Medicine.' After all that Niagara was able to say that its equipment would increase blood circulation.

"Other extensive research projects costing some $750,000 over six years permitted the company to make other claims. Many of the twenty-seven companies cited tried to make the same claims without the research to support them, with the result that some of them are out of business now, Dr. Mote said.

Nussbicker Hearing Aid Center Opens New Office

The Nussbicker Hearing Aid Center has finally got a new home. The firm has moved to the first floor of the Conway hotel lobby and can be reached by entering the Oneida street main door.

The new office is larger, light, airy and modern in design. It is a quiet and peaceful atmosphere for the selection of one of the most important instruments in a person's life — a Zenith Hearing aid.

H. W. Nussbicker invites readers to stop in and see his new offices. He also added that whether you have been wearing a hearing aid for some time, or are just on the verge of trying one for the first time, he cordially invites you to inspect and test Zenith's complete line of living sound hearing aids.

Nussbicker adds that he is sure you will be amazed at their compactness, elegance, performance and price. Whatever your preference or hearing loss dictates, an eyeglass model, an inconspicuous behind-the-ear model, or one of the conventional models, you are sure to find the one best suited to your individual needs in the current Zenith line.

Tom Temple of Tom Temple Window and Door Sales is a proud and happy man as he, on the right, receives a Poloroid camera as winner in a recent sales contest sponsored by De Vac Inc. Roger Bartlett, assistant sales manager, Minneapolis, Minn., is presenting the award.

Tom Temple has won national acclaim by being one of the winners in a sales contest sponsored by the DeVac firm which manufacturers glass and screen porch and breezeway enclosures.

Many Fox Cities homes are enjoying the convenience of the firm's DeVac year-round porches with smaller investments than their owner ever dreamed possible, Temple said.

"You really have to see one to believe how beautiful and practical and liveable they really are," Tom claims. The new glass wall porches are a delight to the lady of the house and the man of the family will claim that the enclosure was economical and the best investment he has made in his home.

Call for an appointment to see one of these porches which has been installed in an Appleton home. The number is RE 3-5463 for Tom Temple of Tom Temple Window and Door Sales, 304 W. Parkway blvd.

Sailboat Will Provide Hours Of Enjoyment

Rig Need Not be Expensive; Upkeep Held to Minimum

BY JOHN BOHANNAN

Some newcomers to boating have been aboard nothing except high-powered outboard runabouts and have thrilled to speeds of 25 to 30 knots. But when the engine has been shut off for fishing, they've noticed something else. There's a peaceful charm to just being out on the water.

At such times, one wonders what sailing would be like, whether it would preserve the same nearness to nature, the restful sound waves slapping against the hull, the song of the wind. The answer is yes. Unfortunately, many persons dismiss this as a day dream. They think sailing calls for an expensive yacht, costly to keep up, requiring large bodies of water.

This isn't true today. There are many small sailboats which can be bought for less than a thousand dollars. They are light and small enough to be taken anywhere by trailer. Almost any river, lake or bay can be used for this low-cost sailing.

Little Upkeep
There's no fuel to buy, no oil to mix with gasoline, and upkeep is reduced to a minimum on those with fiber glass hulls, aluminum spars and dacron sails.

Sailing dinghies are among the handiest of small-budget boats. They also can be rowed or propelled by small outboard motors to double as fishing boats. Those of 10 feet or less in overall length can be had for under $500 complete, ready to sail.

Among these you'll find the fiber glass Sprite, the Casco Bay Kitten, the Grumman aluminum dinghy, and the remarkable Royalite dinghy molded in one piece from a new material produced by U. S. Rubber co. This material has "shape memory." If dented, it will return to its original shape merely by applying heat.

Also in the low-low budget group are sailing canoes. All that is necessary to convert a canoe for sailing is to add a special seat or thwart with a hole for stepping the mast, a fitting to accept the foot of the mast, a pair of leeboards, and a rudder with pintles for mounting on stern gudgeons.

Less Than 1,000
For a pair of sports who don't mind getting wet, there's the sailfish with its 11-foot non-sinkable decked fiber glass hull which looks like a glorified plank. The first big puff will turn it over, but that's part of the fun. Just step on the centerboard and the boat is righted in a jiffy, taking off like a rabbit. Other boats of this type include the Sunfish and the new Meriman Trident. These boats are very inexpensive.

Less than $1,000 will get you a large sailing dinghy such as the popular cat-rigged Penguin now available in fiber glass and the Inter Club, also of fiber glass, both 11 feet long. This budget bracket also includes the 12-foot Firefly scope of molded plywood.

All of the dinghies can be used with the smallest outboard motors mounted directly on the transom or clamped to a stern bracket.

The Wolf River Still is a tremendous lure for fishermen throughout northeastern Wisconsin. The pike run is over but anglers now work the river for white bass and other panfish. This picture was taken near Fremont. The river gets heavy pressure every evening and each weekend.

Federation Backs Party Permit Plan

Conservation Club Organization Sees Need for Heavy Deer Kill

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

Madison—While there is some evidence of discontent among deer hunters about the party permit system of taking extra deer during the fall shooting season, one group of organized sportsmen is demanding a continuation and extension of the system.

The demand comes in the form of a resolution by the Wisconsin Federation of Conservation Clubs, directed to the state legislature.

Principal figure in the organization is Lester Woerpel, a veteran exponent of wildlife causes who lives at Stevens Point and who is Federation executive secretary. The party permit device has reduced over-population of deer and cut forest reproduction losses during the last several years that it was used, the legislature was told.

But there still remain "many areas which cannot be adequately harvested because of the inaccessibility of the terrain and the high populations of the deer," according to the group and therefore the conservation department should be given power to designate additional party permit hunting areas and to schedule the number of hunters who will be permitted to shoot in such districts.

Such flexibility would best suit the total demands of Wisconsin deer management, said the Federation, as it also announced that it would fight any effort to repeal the present party permit law.

In another resolution directed to the lawmakers the Federation was less specific. It demanded a "worthy program of watershed management" to preserve and protect the recreational use potential of Wisconsin streams, now being allowed to deteriorate, but it did not outline what it thought the legislature should do, or how.

Game Commission Puts Up New Signs on Parks
Nebraska game commission Director M. O. Steen has advised the National Wildlife Federation that some 200 bright blue-and-white highway signs have been erected on roads to point travelers to Nebraska's parks, recreation, and special-use areas this summer. The signs, four-feet square, are of aluminum.

Rooster Crows Under 10-Foot Deep Drift
Unusual stories about record snow falls this year still are coming out of West Virginia. Leo Young of Durbin, W. Va., says a white leghorn rooster went to roost in a thornberry tree on the Pete Warner place near Riverton on March 8. A heavy snowfall occurred during the night and the rooster was buried under a 10-foot drift. Unable to get off its perch, the rooster crowed for five days. It was rescued alive, gaunt and hungry.

Useful Bird
The martin is a useful bird. It is believed that mosquitoes make up most of the food which parent birds carry to their young. The adults take most of their food on the wing. In cold spells when flying insects are scarce, martins look for insect food on the surface of water, or, very rarely, pick off small insects from tree tops.

One of my callers who reported dead birds said that most of the bodies were found along Lake Winnebago. As many as 10 or 12 were found in one spot. No doubt the birds, already weakened by the lack of food and exposure to the cold, could not find enough food even there to keep them alive.

This same Appleton caller told of picking up a dozen or more of the birds around the

OUTDOORS IN WISCONSIN Martins Found Dead From Starvation

BY CLARA HUSSONG

Green Bay—If your colony of purple martins seems slow in taking up residence in their apartment house this spring, it might be a good idea to take the house down and look inside.

There may be dead birds in it, individuals which died of starvation during the cold, insectless period earlier this month.

I've had reports of finding dead bodies of these birds in and near their houses from such places as Appleton, Kaukauna and De Pere. I called several Green Bay residents who have had these birds in past years, but none of those I called had found any dead birds. All, however, said there were fewer birds than usual, and the usual springtime breeding and nesting activities appeared weeks behind schedule.

The martin is a useful bird. It is believed that mosquitoes make up most of the food which parent birds carry to their young. The adults take most of their food on the wing. In cold spells when flying insects are scarce, martins look for insect food on the surface of water, or, very rarely, pick off small insects from tree tops.

One of my callers who reported dead birds said that most of the bodies were found along Lake Winnebago. As many as 10 or 12 were found in one spot. No doubt the birds, already weakened by the lack of food and exposure to the cold, could not find enough food even there to keep them alive.

This same Appleton caller told of picking up a dozen or more of the birds around the martin house in his yard. They were so weak and exhausted, they just flopped around on the ground and were easily caught, he told me. He took the birds down in his basement and fed them.

Liver, Milk Diet
What, and how did you feed them, I asked. Very wisely he had called a "bird man" in Boston, he said, and he was advised to make a mixture of milk and ground beef liver, and then to force feed the birds with a medicine dropper. He did this, and a few of the birds died, but most survived until the next day when he released them.

Although a few come earlier, most of the martins who make their homes in Wisconsin arrive between April 10 and 20. In an average spring, there are some flying insects present on which they can feed. Nesting activities begin soon after, and eggs of these birds have been found by the middle of May.

Four or five pure white eggs make up the clutch, and incubation lasts 12 to 14 days. The young remain in the nests for nearly four weeks, and are fed mosquitoes and other small insects by their parents. It is believed that each pair raises just a single brood in a year. The late nesters—eggs have been found as late as mid-July—are thought to be of birds whose first clutch of eggs were destroyed.

By August the colonies begin to scatter over the countryside, and few birds remain around their apartment houses. Those which nested in the state begin their southward journey by the middle of August. Martins seen long after that date are flocks which nested farther north and are migrating through.

High Water Hurts Population of Birds

Change in Nesting Habits Could Mean Fewer Targets for Hunters This Fall, Department Asserts

High water in the state this spring combined with rain, snow and cold early in May will change nesting patterns of many game birds, the Wisconsin conservation department reported today.

The change could mean lower populations when the hunting season arrives this fall. Rabbits and songbirds are also affected but to a lesser extent.

James Hale, chief of wildlife research, gave this rundown on high water damage to various species:

Ducks—Overflowing marshes have flooded some mallard bodies of young birds in it. Ornithologists say that these are the products of late nesting, which were deserted by the parents. Apparently the migration instinct is so strong that when the time comes, the parents leave even though they still have helpless young in the nest. This could easily happen this year, with the late start the birds are getting.

Martins spend the winter in the Amazon valley of Brazil, where the tropical climate insures them of a good supply of flying food. They begin their northward journey in spring months before they arrive on their home grounds, traveling "with the weather." But sometimes the weather is a fooler, like this year, when a few unseasonably warm days caused them to hurry north—to their death, in some cases.

In Wisconsin, and in all of the Mississippi valley, martins are so common and have adapted themselves to civilization so well, we take it for granted that they are as common elsewhere. They aren't. Ornithologists speak of a "puzzling gap" in their distribution.

Howard Cleaves, who has lectured in this area several times in recent years, tells of his efforts in getting martins to take up residence on Staten Island when he moved there years ago. These birds were found in nearby New York spots, but none on the island. It took years of effort to get them established, he reports in an article published by the Staten Island Institute of Arts and Sciences.

nests. Teal are later nesters and losses should be negligible. However, high marsh water will mean that renealing mallards and first nests of teal will be made on higher ground. Hale said they will be likely to use hayfields where they will be more subject to the threat of hay mowers than if they had been able to remain in secure marsh cover.

Prospects Poor
Pheasants—Prospects are poor. In most years the period from about April 20 to May 10, is an indicator of breeding season success. If it is warm and dry there should be a good early hatch. If it is cold and wet there should be a poor late hatch. This year was cold and wet. Just as with the ducks, early nests have been flooded out, and a higher than usual proportion will be in the hayfields this year because of marsh flooding. Abundant moisture has made hayfields grow fast, and early cutting is anticipated.

"Early hay cutting and pheasants don't mix," said Hale.

Ruffed grouse—Some snow covered nests were found in the northeast, but it is still too early to form an accurate picture. Cold, wet periods in April, May and early June, are usually harmful, and nesting success will probably be lower. The only exception will probably be the Northwest area where conditions were drier.

Reproductive Rate
Cottontails—The high reproductive rate of this species should compensate for early losses. A few litters drowned, but rabbit populations are low and the remaining breeders should be in the most secure cover.

Quail—These birds have not yet started nesting and there will be no effect. Professor Joseph Hickey of the University of Wisconsin wildlife management department said songbirds which catch their food on the wing were probably the only ones which suffered losses, and these were apparently slight. They include the swallows, swifts, martins, phoebes and kingbirds. Hickey explained that songbirds store protein in their breast muscles and that it usually takes about five days without food for them to reach a critical condition. He said if the cold spell had lasted about two more days the mortality could have been high. As it was, losses were confined to a few per cent.

A report from the department's northeast area headquarters at Woodruff where snow depths reached 10 inches in May, indicated that robins as well as swallows, martins and swifts suffered "heavy losses." The report observed that many songbirds were either in the process of egg laying or incubating and forced to desert their nests.

Fine, Early Response
Chain O'Lakes Looks Toward Breaking Record Year's Mark

Waupaca—One of the busiest summers on record has been forecast for the Chain O'Lakes resort region. All indications point toward an even better year than 1959 which was the record year.

Both Kenneth Glover, outgoing president of the Association of Commerce, and Mrs. H. G. Vanderwalker, who mans the association's information booth on courthouse square, reported the number of information requests are running considerably ahead of last year.

Cottage reservations on the lakes are also reported to be higher than at the same time a year ago. All of the association officials agreed that the exceptionally wet spring has not affected or discouraged tourists from coming to the Chain O'Lakes area.

Mrs. Vanderwalker said the information booth was opened a week earlier than normal and that an unusually large number of inquiries were received.

Official Opening
The information booth officially opened for the summer season today. Weekend hours will be from 9 a. m. to 8 p. m. and weekday hours from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m. The booth will open an hour earlier on Memorial day.

Merlin Mangert, chairman of the association's Chain O'Lakes committee, reported a "terrific response" to the association's booth at the Milwaukee sport show in March.

Mangert also outlined some of the activities planned on the lakes for the summer. The traditional July 4 fireworks display will be held from Rainbow lake. In case of rain the fireworks date will be moved to July 9.

Venetian Night
A Venetian night will again be held. It will be on July 30 this year instead of being in conjunction with the fireworks display. Aug. 6 has been set as a rain date.

No starting time for the parade has been set, however, it will start during daylight and end after dark as in other years. Boats are decorated for the parade with lights which are turned on after dark.

Mangert said cottage owners will be asked to participate in Venetian night by decorating their shore lines with lights and Japanese lanterns.

All signs point to one of the most successful summer seasons in the Chain O'Lakes history.

BOTH BARRELS

Every year about this time a certain number of people are overpowered by a feeling that they have all the capabilities and instincts of a mother deer.

The feeling becomes so intense, in fact, that they are compelled to pick up and bring home new-born fawns found in the woods.

This is done, presumably, under the guise of kindness but in this reporter's view (and it is shared by many) to do so is the unkindest act of all. If those who would do such "good" would take the time to brush up on a couple of outdoor basics they soon would see the fault in taking a wild creature out of its natural habitat.

The majority of fawns are born late in May or early June. For several weeks after birth it is common for the fawns to remain near their birthplace. The does leave them several times a day to feed and it is usually during one of these periods that persons will find them and pick them up, assuming they are lost or that the mothers have deserted them.

As a point of fact, fawns rarely get lost and does almost never desert them.

It may be argued that after keeping watch over a fawn for some time the mother still didn't appear. Give the does some credit. She knows you are near and will not approach while you are close.

It's all wrong to pick up a fawn except under the most rare conditions. In the first place, it's against the law. But there's this to consider, too: Suppose you take a fawn home and raise it. Perhaps you even purchase a deer farm license as is required by law. You will in a few short months, have a tame deer on your hands.

The animal will have no fear of man or other things domestic. You have, by taming the deer, almost assured it of an early, and often cruel, death. It could be by a car or by dogs. A tame deer in hunting season is no better off than a calf in a slaughterhouse.

There is something to this matter of death with dignity as applied to man or animals. And there can be no dignity for a tame deer to stroll up to a man he has never known, reason to fear and be shot down. Neither can there be any dignity for such a hunter, but that is another story.

And there is no dignity for any wild animal in a pen or cage. It is contrary to an animal's basic nature to be so confined.

In my opinion it is the worst kind of exploitation, and downright cruelty, to pen up any wild thing be it deer, fox, coon, etc. I firmly believe that if the wild creature had a choice it would choose, without hesitation, death to any form of captivity.

It isn't lawful, wise or humane to pick up a fawn in the woods. In only rare instances will the fawn you believe to be lost or deserted actually die. And, even if it did die, would that not be better than the fate you would thrust upon it? Unless you are a female deer and have four legs to match, leave those "lost" fawns alone.

Local Fishing Poor but Most Other Areas Have Good Angling Reports

Fair to poor fishing conditions in the Fox river valley region compares with favorable reports in most other sections of the state as anglers look ahead to a long holiday weekend.

The conservation department's weekly wrapup of angling conditions says fishing continues to improve with reports of excellent catches widespread across the state.

Walleyes have been active in the Black River and Lake Arbuthus in Clark county; Lake Wisconsin, Spider Lake and the Flambeau flowage in Iron county and the Wisconsin river in Juneau county.

Some muskies were taken during the week from Boot and Lac Vieux Desert lakes in Vilas county and from Long lake in Chippewa county.

Trout were reported hitting in Lincoln county's Prairie river and in the famed Brule river.

Ozaukee county—Warden Chuck Wranosky: Walleyes, and pike and perch being taken on northern end of Lake Winnebago. Wolf river fishing poor with only a few white bass and catfish hitting. Water still high, but dropping.

Winnebago county—Warden Frank Deringer: Fishing in general on all species good to excellent. Perch fishing very good. Small minnows and worms best bait. White bass still hitting on the Fox and Wolf rivers but showing a slight drop compared to last weekend. Small minnows and streamer flies and spin casting lures producing best results. Walleyes and sand pike hitting very well at the mouth of the Fox and Lake Winnebago. Minnows and streamer flies best producers. Northern pike starting to hit well in the shallow bays in lakes Poygan, Kegonsa and Kegonsa. Large minnows and spoons producing best. Black bass catches are showing off some of the best in Lake Winnebago.

Dodge county—Warden Pat Burdett and Mel Lange: Beaver Dam lake northern fishing excellent. Hundreds of fish being taken every day. Bullheads are making good catches. Handling State Money

The state's new Department of Administration predicts a saving of $50,000 per year as the result of a very simple change in the method of handling some state funds. Joe E. Nusbaum, commissioner of administration, has ordered the change as the result of a study looking for ways of improving government efficiency.

During the study it was noted that federal income taxes withheld from the salaries and wages of state employees need not be deposited in banks to the credit of the federal government for as long as six weeks to two months after the time of withholding. Since the withholdings total approximately $1,300,000 a month, delay in depositing permits the investment of this money. The result is that the state has the equivalent of about one month's withholdings invested at a profit continuously. The report points out that this saving will be possible as long as the present federal regulations are continued.

There were 21 other recommendations, some of which will require legislation to make them effective. Among them were such proposals as making investment board meetings open to the public except when specific investments or personal matters are considered, calling for new bids for the state's major banking, termination of duplication of efforts by UW Board of Regents and the investment board by having the board serve as investment counsel for the university, forbidding the practice of having private companies reimburse investment board employees for travel expenses and requiring written contracts between the board and those firms providing services for the board, proposing efforts to reduce brokerage fees and at the same time to attain the highest quality of services available, and suggesting a law restricting the financial activities of employees of the board and requiring the board to set rules to prevent conflict of interests in employee investments.

The state investment board has in its charge huge sums of money. In the management of its investments it must exercise good judgment and it must act in the utmost secrecy. When such huge sums of money are being invested and reinvested, people with advance information as to what is to be sold or what is to be bought frequently will find themselves in a position to make a profit by tailoring their private investments to the expected results of the huge public investments. Therefore it is encouraging to know that the Department of Administration is keeping an eye on the activities of the commission for this occasional check serves to keep everyone involved on his toes. Likewise it should be noted that in spite of the recommendations for change, the important and fundamental policies of the board are sound and have been over the years. True enough the $50,000 per year is well worth saving but of course it is a trifling sum compared to the total business handled by the investment board. It appears that the people of Wisconsin can take satisfaction both in the indication of a sound policy on the part of the investment board as well as in the effective work of the Department of Administration in making this study.

Soviet Reasons for Jamming Ike's Speech

The Russian leaders are very astute to allow their people to hear only a Soviet version of President Eisenhower's speech Wednesday evening. The masses come to wonder exactly why Mr. Khrushchev made such a big thing just now about spy flights which he knew were taking place for years.

The President's report explained very well why there were contradictory statements made about the plane's mission. It also should answer the critics who have complained that we sent out the U-2 provocatively just before the delicate summit meetings were scheduled. Mr. Eisenhower pointed out that it was a matter of deciding whether to discontinue the regular flights and that there was information to be gathered that would not be available later. It was suspected that the Russians would attempt some spectacular space flight just before the Paris meetings. Their space ship with the dummy which they hoped to get safely back to earth was exactly that. Extremely pointed was the President's recalling from the Pearl Harbor catastrophe that attacks can be made while supposedly honorable negotiations are going on.

The Russian people might also wonder what they stand to lose if the open skies plan were adopted, with the U-2 ships turned over to the United Nations to give warning of attack from any nation. They might come to suspect that Khrushchev's hysterical actions in Paris were due far more to his fear of his own destruction at home than concern for the safety of the people of the Soviet Union.

The President's speech also was a reasoned answer to the home-grown critics who eagerly have charged the administration with bungling but have offered no better way of handling the situation if the safety of United States citizens is to be kept paramount. But men like Adlai Stevenson at least have the chance to read or hear the President's speech. The Russians will just have to do with "interpretations."

Saga of Machines—and Men

Geography teachers may have had a little trouble these past few days explaining that a trip around the world can cover 41,519 miles. But they shouldn't have had much of a problem in arousing discussion about the submarine Triton's magnificent and historic feat of girdling the globe under water.

Other recent occurrences like the American "spy" being caught in Russia or the West Virginia primary election have somehow taken the spotlight away from the Triton but these should in no way overshadow its achievement. The 84-day underwater trip undoubtedly will have a place in future histories as one of the most significant events of our times, filled as they have been with history-making events and progress in numerous fields of endeavor.

The use of atomic power makes it possible for the Triton to have a cruising range of more than 100,000 miles. The around-the-world trip proved that the ship was capable of what its designers planned for it to do. It was their brains and thousands of skilled hands which took uranium and steel and a thousand and one other materials and fashioned them into this remarkable vessel and others of its type which made the polar trips.

The Triton's trip proved also that a crew of finely trained men could pass the test, the rigorous test, imposed by almost three months under water in comparatively confined quarters. This is the real test — the test of men's hearts and minds. These men and their skipper, Capt. Edward L. Beach, were pioneers and they came through with flying colors.

This is the lesson which geography students and others can learn from the Triton's achievement. The fact that its trip took more than 40,000 miles is easily explained. It's more difficult to get across the need for fixing one's eye on an objective and working at it until it's achieved.

Douglas to Get 15 Ballots to Win

100 YEARS AGO

Quoted from the Appleton Crescent for the week of May 26, 1860.

Private advices lead us to believe that if Stephen A. Douglas is not nominated at the National Democratic convention at Baltimore by the 15th ballot, Horatio Seymour of New York will be brought forward by the cool conservative advocates of popular sovereignty as a peace offering.

If the Southern minority will not accept Seymour, the convention will adjourn and Douglas will go to the people. This will, at worst, throw the election into the House of Representatives, where Lincoln's prospects are not near as good as were Fremont's. The house would fail to elect and, as the Senate must choose the Vice President from the two highest candidates, we should have a Democratic Vice President who would immediately become President.

Appleton was ready to welcome 30,000 visitors into the city Sunday when the Green Bay Diocesan Union of Holy Name societies held its Holy Year rally.

Helen Deering and Mary Jane Appleton were chosen as the outstanding girl athletes of the year by members of the Kaukauna High School Girl's Athletic association.

Miss Helen Stansbury, Appleton, was awarded first prize in a poetry contest conducted by the magazine "The Atlantic." Four hundred and sixty-one poems were submitted.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph J. Watts were honored at a dinner of the Campus club of Lawrence college and the Institute of Paper Chemistry at Riverview Country club. Watts was to retire that spring as business manager of the college and was appointed college vice president for the next year.

Jack Olson Couldn't Make Up His Mind

BY JOHN WINGAARD

Madison — Jack Olson, the young politician who would like to be the Republican nominee for governor, came to the Republican state convention a week ago with an admiring coterie of assistants, hired and volunteer.

Wingard

There were Young Republicans and older Republicans. There were advertising counsel and publicity assistants and hospitality chairmen. He had a press room and a corps of eager young men who strung up banners and passed out campaign buttons and made themselves generally noticed.

But he should have brought some politicians. It is doubtful that he could have won the endorsement of the delegate convention for the Republican nomination. But he might have made a respectable show. As it was, he confounded the delegates almost as much as he confused the reporters attending.

The cue to Olson's anomalous position is that he couldn't make a decision whether to try for the convention backing.

All during the pre-convention period he was expressing doubts about the wisdom of endorsement, while implicitly campaigning for it by visiting every Republican organization club meeting and district and county party caucus he could find.

AT MILWAUKEE

At the convention he was denouncing the idea of endorsement to the press in a series of press conferences, but within a few hours he was on the rostrum confessing that he had hoped to be the endorsed candidate.

He was criticizing, in those press conferences, a rules committee report on the question of endorsement while he could have been arranging for a floor fight on the adoption of the rules, which the rules committee expected and intended to achieve by making its report early in the convention program.

When the rules committee report came up for adoption, the committee chairman loudly and clearly emphasized that the subject was debatable.

The convention chairman paused for the expected challenge and debate. But it never came. Not a single Olson backer was prepared for the opportunity, which would have provided an early test of convention sentiment, and might even have provided a way for Olson to put his name before the delegates with a chance of winning.

It was hard for the delegates and the press galleries to resist the impression that the Olson campaign disclosed a certain naivete and uncertainty about the business of politics, and a corollary suspicion that the young man from Wisconsin Dells is not yet ready for competition in the upper levels of state politics.

THE ERROR

The only way in which the Olson campaign would have made practical sense would have been if he had ignored the convention altogether, and made it clear that he intended to challenge the convention choice.

That was clearly what he wanted to do — but he didn't quite know how to bring it off. Olson repeatedly pointed to the 1956 convention refusal to endorse Sen. Wiley, whom he called the "leader" of the party, and Wiley's subsequent renomination in the open primary by a narrow margin.

Aside from the obvious fact that Wiley as an 18-year officeholder was in stronger position than Olson who was never figured in upper level political activities before, Olson missed the point that he could not gracefully solicit endorsement on the one hand — as he admitted he did — and then when he realized he couldn't get it dismiss it as wrong and undemocratic and unwise.

He would have commanded more attention and sympathy and interest, and cut a more consistent figure altogether, had he announced clearly before the convention his intention to become a candidate without convention or organization blessing. He would have done better, too, without such absurd gimmicks as the "Four Lakes Polling company," which turned out to be a handful of his own aides working on convention hotel telephones.

No Hand Can Stay Dawn

The dawn comes marching marching on
Light on its beaten track
No hand can stay the birth of day
Nothing can hold it back

It comes from far beyond the seas
Putting the stars to flight
Welcomed by winds that sway the pines
The morning meets the night

Tall fingers of light reaching up
Through the first purple glow
Then the sunlight on the hilltops
The valleys dark below

New light leaping over the land
Swift as a frightened fawn
Soon the flush of a full born day
No hand can stay the dawn

Youngsters Disillusioned Because Of Planning for Patrol Picnic

Editor, Post-Crescent:

There was a very nice picture (page A18, May 24) in the Post-Crescent taken at the school safety patrol picnic at Pierce park, sponsored by the Appleton Lions club and the Appleton City Council but the picture only told the beginning of the story! There was no picture of the many disillusioned youngsters who went through the long line-up and got only a cup of ice cream and a carton of milk when they had a "valuable ticket" worth three hot dogs, potato chips, ice cream, and a carton of milk!

Is this all the reward the city council can furnish for these faithful youngsters who stood on their corners, rain, shine, or wind, helping others cross the busy corners? Do we have such poor planners on our city council that they can't even run a simple picnic properly when the public is paying the bill? How can they run the city and all it's problems if a picnic is too much for them?

In addition, I have always felt that the Appleton Lions club was a good organization, but how can they let a thing get so out of hand that they hand out three hot dogs at once to each one in line in the beginning and have nary a one for the end of line. Someone ought to think up a new system before this happens again.

Church-State Separation Has Dangers

Editor, Post-Crescent:

A May 20 forum letter regrets the P-C's "bias in your editorial jubilation," over St. Norbert's federal loan.

Could that be to the "best national interest?" ... With about 2,000 parochial school pupils in Kaukauna alone, and minimum public school teacher wages listed at $200 per pupil, per year! ... Taxes?

Then too, concentrate on the consequences of church-state separation of communist countries ... without God, without prayer, there is hatred, injustice, brutality, diabolical fanaticism.

Trujillo's Pledges Have Little Merit

From The Washington Post

After 20 years of despotic rule, Generalissimo Rafael Trujillo is asking the world to believe that he is a reformed man who may even hold an election in which no member of his family will be a candidate. To the absolute ruler of the Dominican republic this surely represents the maximum sacrifice, since his government has been run on the family plan. The generalissimo also has shown remarkable restraint in replying to the recent criticism of police brutality made by the island's Catholic bishops. In his unctuous reply to the clerics, Trujillo did not promise to halt the arrests, to be sure — but then the benefactor did have the grace to refrain from suggesting that Moscow gold prompted the church's feeling criticism of his regime.

It is not surprising that the isolated tyrant is belatedly promising to become a good citizen — but it is astonishing that his conversion should be taken so seriously. Sen. Smathers recently visited the Dominican Republic and after supping with Trujillo informed the press that free elections might be held. Did the senator really intend to pass along the benefactor's promise so uncritically?

There is no free press, no legal opposition party, and no guarantee against police brutality in the Dominican Republic. Is it possible in such an atmosphere to talk of a free election? Trujillo long ago could have ordered a halt to the political arrests which the Catholic church has protested. He has not, and to quote another cunning dictator, the shrimps may whistle before the generalissimo willingly allows one of his subjects to shout "Down with Trujillo!"

the evils of society today are due to "liberalism" in relation to truth and morality? The worst evils are the pure secularism of our day ... the shutting of God and our Savior out of the schools in which over 30,000,000 children are taught; plus the so-called "freedoms" ... Freedom in the theater, in writing, in drawing, in fact in all departments of art and thought.

For instance, consider the unrestrained with which pornography, periodicals, books, comics, movies, etc., etc., are devoted to the excitement and exploitation of evil in people's lives, and overtly appeals to the basest animal instincts in human beings. Consider the monstrous magnitude and despicable character of this gigantic machine which grinds away at the hearts and consciences of the young. And with no moral antidote — (church - state separation) the world is sick unto death!

Then let's heed the stern warning of Mrs. Roosevelt, "The Soviet Union is a going concern that cannot be beaten by military force, the only way to beat her is by being far better than they are." (P. C. 9-30-57). Let's help the schools which teach the Golden Rules!

The Cardinals, out-hit 12-6, beat southpaw Johnny Antonelli (3-1) for the first time in nine decisions over the past two seasons with four runs in the fifth. Ken Boyer's eleventh home run, tops in the majors, came with a man on and capped the spurt. Ron Kline (2-3) was the winner with Lindy McDaniel's save in the seventh after Orlando Cepeda hit a 2-run homer. The Dodgers collected all their runs in the first four innings off loser Glen Hobbie.

Opening Pile-Up Feared Chief Steward Will Warn Drivers To Take It Easy on Initial Lap

BY DALE BURGESS
Indianapolis, Ind. (AP)—Jim Hurtubise, hottest rookie to hit the Indianapolis Motor

Elisian and Rathmann

gler, himself a former racer and riding mechanic, will tell them the 200-lap race won't be won in the first lap — and please don't try it. Cars get faster every year, and drivers get bolder as the purse gets bigger. Speedway officials have fears of the entire field being wiped out in one pile up while the cars are bunched in starting positions. Elisian Killed It almost happened two years ago when cars of Ed Elisian and Dick Rathmann tangled at the front of the pack, causing a 15-car wreck that killed Pat O'Connor. His death, and that of two drivers in practice runs last year, brought the track's toll to 50. Elisian was killed in a race at Milwaukee last summer in the same Traveler Special in which Hurtubise set a new speedway 10-mile qualifying record of 148.056 miles an hour last Sunday. The 33-car field averaged another record, 144.070.

The Traveler has been rebuilt, of course. Brand new Watsons will be driven by the first-position starter, Eddie Sachs of Allentown, Pa., who held the qualifying record until Hurtubise broke it; and the two other front row veterans, last year's winner Roger Ward and Jim Rathmann of Miami.

Rathmann finished second last year by 23 seconds. He has taken three seconds in 10 races but never has won. Hurtubise will have to start in twenty-third place, in the eighth row, because he qualified late after 22 drivers already had earned their positions.

Benny Paret Ends Jordan's Title Reign

New Champion
Expected to Defend Against Thompson

BY PATRICK McNULTY
Las Vegas, Nev. (AP)—The confused welterweight division today had a new champion, Cuba's Benny "Kid" Paret, who ended Friday night Don Jordan's lackluster reign as the 147-pound kingpin.

But there was still confusion aplenty. Paret's first defense of his crown is expected to be against Federico Thompson of Argentina.

Jordan's buddy, Mickey Cohen, still shuffled in the wings. And there is the question of who gets Jordan's $65,000 purse for his third defense of the title. A crowd of 3,692 here, plus a national TV audience, watched the onetime sugar cane cutter whip Jordan at 15 unimpressive but hard-fought rounds.

Against Thompson
"Paret's first defense will be against Thompson and the winner of that meets Luis Rodriguez," said NBA President Anthony Maseroni. "That has been the NBA's plan for some time and that is the way it is going to be."

Jordan, ex street fighter from Los Angeles' East side, had a 90-day rematch agreement with the Paret camp. But Paret's manager, Manuel Alvaro, said "We will only fight for a promoter who guarantees us as much as Jordan got this time—$85,000."

Most ring observers feel that after Friday night's uninspired showing, such angels don't exist.

Hand Over $75,000
Promoters of the fight handed over about $75,000 of Jordan's purse to his estranged managers, Jackie McCoy and Don Nesselth, Los Angeles used car salesman. Before the fight, Jordan had agreed to pay them to buy up his contract.

One of the ex-champ's recent advisers was Cohen, who came to the fight with an enthusiastic group of business associates and police escorts. "Me and my shadow," said ex-gambler Mickey, indicating the husky cops who trailed him constantly during his unimpressive stay in this gambler's mecca.

While Jordan was at a nearby hospital, getting a slashed left eye sewed up, he got more good news: His ex wife, Stella, had attached whatever remained of his share of the purse.

Bailey's Grand Slam Whips Braves in Last of Ninth, 9-5

Mathews Hits Pair Of Homers

Cincinnati (AP)—It happened late. It happened quick. And the Milwaukee Braves may still be ducking.

"It" was a grand slam home run by Cincinnati's Ed Bailey in the last of the ninth that hoisted the Reds to a 9-5 victory over the Braves Friday night.

The situation was right off the pages of a story book when Bailey approached the plate. The score was tied, the bases full and two out. Bailey picked on a pitch by Milwaukee's young reliever Ken MacKenzie and drove it into the right field bleachers, and, as 11,000 partisans roared, ran around the bases behind his three teammates.

Within Half Game
The victory hauled the Reds to within a half game of the third place Braves who remained four games out of first when the league-leading San Francisco Giants were defeated.

And all of this happened after the Braves had built up a 5-0 lead.

The clubs were matched again today, Carl Wiley, 2-2, or Joey Jay, 0-1, facing Joe Hook, 3-3. The Braves started the scoring in the first inning as Eddie Mathews cracked his eighth homer off Reds' starter Bob Purkey. Milwaukee scored again in the third as Bill Bruton singled, stole second and ran home on Red Schoendienst's single in the fourth. Joe Adcock doubled and after a delay of 54 minutes because of rain scored on a sacrifice fly by Al Spangler.

Two runs crossed in the fifth. Schoendienst walked and then Mathews came up again, and this time socked his ninth homer into the bleachers.

When the Reds came to bat they began to catch up. Through four innings Milwaukee led 4-0.

Pirates Give Up
Minor Leaguer
Julian Javier

Pittsburgh (AP)—Left-handed pitcher Wilmer "Vinegar Bend" Mizell is coming to the Pittsburgh Pirates from St. Louis along with utility infielder Dick Gray for Julian Javier, minor league second baseman, and a pitcher to be named later.

In announcing the straight-player deal Friday night, Pirate General Manager Joe L. Brown said "I'm giving up one of the most brilliant prospects in the minor leagues, but I'm shooting everything for this year."

Brown said Mizell would report to the Pirates as soon as possible while Gray will go to the Pirate farm team at Columbus in the International league, which now owns his contract. Javier, who has been with Columbus, will report to the Cardinals.

Mizell, 13 this season, is slated to move into the Pirates' starting rotation when he arrives. Mizell, 29, had the best of his six seasons last year as he compiled a 13-10 record. His overall record since coming into the majors with St. Louis in 1952 is 69-70. He missed 1954-55 because of military service.

Sugar' Hopes To Win Title For Sixth Time

Robinson Plans To Show Up for Pender Bout

BY JACK HAND

New York — (AP) — "Sugar" Ray Robinson, five times the world middleweight champion, hopes to make it six on June 10 when he boxes Paul Pender in Boston for the New York-Massachusetts version of the title.

The 40-year-old New Yorker claims he is rounding into shape and positively plans to show up for the Pender fight. He said his failure to appear in Baltimore recently, leading to his suspension by the Maryland commission, was due to a misunderstanding.

Did Robinson feel he had to knock out Pender to win in Boston?

"I'd like to win," he said. "I don't care how. I never go into a fight with the idea of knocking a man out. I am preparing for 15 rounds. Of course, a knockout always is the best insurance. Somehow, I always seem to do best when there is a challenge involved."

Never Squawked
"I never squawked about the decision in Boston (a split verdict for Pender Jan. 22). From the letters and wires I got after the fight, I seemed to have the sympathy of the television public on my side."

A visitor to the gymnasium caught "Sugar" in a 2-round sparring session with Clarence Hinnant. Robinson was trying to sharpen his left jab after dropping Hinnant with a hook in Tuesday's workout. It was not one of his better performances.

Robinson will get a rich payday for the Pender rematch. He said he gets 70 per cent of the television money, generally accepted to be $150,000. That, in addition to his 30 per cent of the gate.

The ex-champ plans to do most of his pre-fight work here. He does not know yet when he will move to Boston.

Burleson Duel With Elliott Meet Feature

Modesto, Calif. — (AP) — Headed by the heralded mile duel between Australia's champion Herb Elliott and Oregon college Dwyer Burleson, the nineteenth California relays tonight boasts its strongest field.

Included are sprinter Ray Norton, current world's fastest human, 400-meter hurdles record holder Glenn Davis, and shot putters Parry O'Brien and Bill Nieder.

The top interest centers on the mile run matching Elliott, the Aussie with the world record at 3:54.5, and Burleson, the 20-year-old sophomore who last April 23 ran a 3:58.6, breaking the American citizen's record in becoming the second U.S. runner to go under four minutes.

Bailey's Grand Slam Beats Milwaukee, 9-5

waukee starter Lew Burdette had allowed only two hits. After getting the first man out in the fifth, Burdette gave up singles to Eddie Kasko and Vada Pinson. Gus Bell's double sent them home. Frank Robinson added a single and that was all for Burdette, who was replaced by Bob Rush.

Jerry Lynch's single scored Bell and then Bailey added a sacrifice fly to send Robinson over the plate.

Cincinnati tied the score in the sixth as Elio Chacon bunted and was safe as both Adcock and Rush chased the ball and neither covered first.

A sacrifice and a fly moved Chacon into scoring position and he did just that as Pinson whacked a triple to center.

That was the end of Rush.

MacKenzie came on and retired eight straight Reds, including Kasko, the leadoff batter in the ninth. A triple by Pinson started the trouble. After giving up two walks to fill the bases, MacKenzie struck out Lynch on three pitches.

Bailey was the next batter. He didn't strike out.

MacKenzie took the loss and is 0-1. Jim Brosnan won in relief to make his record 2-0.

Milwaukee — (AP) — Lew Burdette, 25-4, was the winning pitcher for the Milwaukee Braves, 9-5, over the Cincinnati Reds, 5-1, in a game that was a pitchers' duel.

Burdette pitched a complete game, allowing only two runs, one earned, and striking out eight.

Pinson's triple in the sixth inning was the only hit for the Reds.

Burdette's record is now 25-4, and his ERA is 2.16.

Burdette Says He'll Need Luck to Be 20-Game Winner Again in '60

Cincinnati — (AP) — Just before the battle the Milwaukee Braves' Lew Burdette said, "I'll need luck to win 20 games this year."

A few hours later it appeared luck has run out on him as the Cincinnati Reds ran over the Braves 9-5 on Ed Bailey's ninth-inning, 2-out, bases-loaded home run.

Burdette didn't toss the ball Bailey drilled into the bleachers. The Milwaukee right-hander was finished with his shower by that time after giving up four fifth-inning hits that led to four runs and allowed the Reds to get a foothold for a comeback victory.

Before the game Burdette said the frequent rainouts and his assignment as both a starter and reliever cut down his chances of winning 20 games this year. He reached the prized total in each of the last two seasons.

Out-Sized Mitt Helps Wilhelm Top New York, 3 to 2

Orioles Regain Lead; Kemmerer Hurls White Sox Past Athletics

By The Associated Press
Ever catch butterflies with a glove? Clint Courtney did, and now the Baltimore Orioles are back in the American league lead.

Courtney, surrounded by Wilhelm's knuckleball pitches with a new, out-sized mitt Friday and the Orioles beat the New York Yankees, 3-2.

It was the first time anyone had tried the glove, designed especially to combat Wilhelm's tosses. It also was the first time Courtney, late of Washington, ever had caught Wilhelm. Whether it was the glove, Courtney or the new catcher's mitt, after his first complete game of the season in 28-23 previous innings this season, Wilhelm's catchers had been charged with 11 passed balls.

Courtney didn't let any get away with a man on base. The victory pushed the Orioles a half-game ahead of Cleveland, rained out at Detroit.

Third place Chicago, also a half-game behind, beat Kansas City 7-4. And Boston beat the Washington 4-3 in a game interrupted by a brawl.

The Orioles have won 11 of their last 15. They sent the Yankees to fifth place with a 3-run fifth against Art Ditmar. A 2-out single by Gene Woodling capped the rally after rookie Mary Breeding's 2-run double. Wilhelm (2-2) gave up six hits, two each by Roger Maris and "Yogi" Berra — and each drove in a run.

Casey Grumbles
Yankee Manager Casey Stengel, grumbling about the need of a rule change to cover the new catcher's mitt, admitted he was giving further thought to benching Mickey Mantle (0-for-18) and Bill Skowron (2-for-25).

Russ Kemmerer pitched 5 2-3 innings of four-hit, shutout relief for the White Sox after starter Billy Pierce lost a 3-2 lead. Kemmerer, now 1-2, had dropped five in a row since last August. Luis Aparicio had four of the Sox' nine hits and scored four runs. He broke a 4-4 tie in the seventh against loser Ray Herbert (2-3), scoring on Al Smith's infield out after hitting his second triple.

A walk and consecutive singles by Vic Wertz, Gene Stegelmeyer and Frank Malone gave Boston two runs in the eighth that broke a 2-2 tie. It was only the second victory in 13 games for the Red Sox, but their third of the season against Camilo Pascual (5-4) who had won four in a row. Tom Brewer (3-4) won it with an eight-hitter, one a pinch home run by Lennie Green in the ninth.

The brawl came in the fifth. It started when Pete Runnels, the AL's top hitter .360, said something to Pascual after ducking a high, inside pitch and then watching a third strike. Pascual was knocked down and suffered an ankle injury in the melee that followed, but stayed on the mound and finished with 13 strikeouts. That gave him the major league lead by an 81-79 margin over Don Drysdale of Los Angeles.

New York — (AP) — Rain washed away another Big Ten Baseball game Friday for the Wisconsin Badgers who moved over to Bloomington, Ind., to close their league season today in a doubleheader with Indiana.

The Badgers and Ohio State cancelled their Friday game after rain began to fall. It was another in a long series of rainouts for the Badgers who have a 3-4 record in the conference and are 12-6 overall.

In addition to today's twin-bill, the Badgers also have several non-conference games left on their schedule.

The church members said they had chartered a bus several times to travel the 185 miles to see the games, but when they got there, they were constantly harassed by

April 25 Talk By Nikita Key to Summit Failure

Khrushchev Didn't Plan to Deal at Paris Meeting

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington — The big date in current history is April 25, 1960, and not May 1, when the U-2 was downed in the Soviet Union.

Lawrence

In view of what has happened since, extraordinary significance attaches to the speech delivered by Nikita Khrushchev at Baku on April 25, which was reported in a fragmentary way in the American press.

An examination of the Baku speech shows clearly that the Soviet government had come to the conclusion that it would get nowhere at the "summit" conference. Overnight all the government-controlled radio stations and newspapers in the Soviet Union began to prepare the people for a "summit" failure and daily blamed the west.

On that same day, the Soviet Premier intimated that he planned to use military power to enforce his prospective seizure of West Berlin. He said in part:

One-Sided Approach
"If the western powers refuse to sign a peace treaty with the German Democratic republic, they will not retain the rights on the preservation of which they are insisting. They naturally will forfeit the right of access to West Berlin by land, water and air."

In another portion of his speech, the Soviet premier practically admitted that he had no hope of reaching any agreement at the "summit" conference.

"The nearer the day (May 18) the heads of governments are to meet, the more one-sided is the approach of certain statesmen of the western powers to the problems before the conference . . .

"A recent speech by the United States Undersecretary of State, Dillon, which is presented as a statement of the United States policy on the eve of the 'summit' conference . . . just reeks of the 'cold war' spirit . . .

Test of Good Faith
Dillon tried to strike a note of ill will and suspicion on the very eve of the 'summit' conference when it is so essential that an atmosphere of international confidence should be created and maintained.

"Dillon referred to the 'summit' as a test of the good faith of the intentions of the Soviet Union, pretending that the outcome of the conference depends on the Soviet Union alone rather than on all of its participants . . .

"To judge from the statement by Mr. Dillon, it comes out that the United States government will not be willing to reach an agreement or disarmament and on the ways of improving east-west relations unless its view on the Berlin question is accepted.

"Why, then, did Dillon have to make a statement so obviously out of tune with the tenor of relations between the USSR and the United States since my conversations with President Eisenhower at Camp David?

German Issue
The Soviet premier then made a vehement attack on the disarmament negotiations and accused the west of refusing really to reach an agreement. He added:

"Consider a speech made by Mr. Herter, the man who heads the United States department of state and consequently shapes the foreign policy of his country.

"Mr. Herter wants to engage us in discussions on the reunification of Germany, on holding some kind of plebiscites there, in discussions on questions which are not subject to discussion by states . . .

Bob Cochran, 47-year-old St. Louis salesman, has reached the finals of the British Amateur Golf championships which are being played in Northern Ireland.

represented at the 'summit' conference . . .
"If, despite all our efforts, the western powers refuse to seek jointly with the Soviet Union a concerted solution of the problem of the peace treaty, and against common sense will ignore this question, we, of course, will go our own way and sign a peace treaty with the German Democratic republic . . .

Personal Attack
"It is common knowledge that the signing of a peace treaty puts an end to all terms stemming from the surrender of a country. Therefore, when a peace treaty is signed with the German Democratic Republic, the terms stemming from the surrender will lose their force on the entire territory controlled by the government of that state. Consequently, the rights which the western powers obtained as a result of the surrender of Hitler Germany, including the right for the further preservation of the occupation status in West Berlin, will also lose their force with regard to this territory."

Khrushchev made a personal issue of it to lay the foundations for the withdrawal of the invitation to the American president to visit the Soviet Union.

A former Soviet intelligence agent who defected in southeast Asia—where he was working as a Soviet "diplomat"—was asked on the TV panel "Meet the Press" why the Soviet government doesn't want President Eisenhower to visit there. He said:

"The Soviet communist regime is in no way interested in allowing so popular a man as the American president to come to the Soviet Union. They are definitely afraid of the impact such a visit can make on the Soviet people."

Jerry Barber's Fat Lead Shrinks to Single Stroke

Indianapolis — Jerry Barber's fat early lead in the $50,000 "500" Festival open golf tournament had shrunk to a single stroke today at the midway point as the field hustled to get out of the way of Monday's 500-mile race cars.

Part of the course lies inside the track and the tourney has to end Sunday night, regardless of whether the scheduled 72 holes have been completed.

A rainstorm ended just in time for the early threesomes to tee off Friday morning and the day's program was completed in spite of thunderheads that hung over the course all day.

To Your Good Health
Allergies Vary in Degree, Sometimes Outgrown

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.
"Dear Dr. Molner: Please write about allergies involving food. Does a person outgrow them with age?—B.C."

Yes, within limits, you sometimes are lucky enough to outgrow an allergy. But it is gradual and you mustn't expect too much. If, for example, you are allergic to strawberries, you may gradually be able to nibble a berry or two, or have a bit of strawberry in a salad or a sauce, but don't go overboard. Don't think you can sit down to a big helping of strawberries. That would just be tempting fate and risking a return of the original sensitivity. After all, there's a reason for allergies. It's nature's way of telling you to avoid something that breaks out in a rash, or their lips or faces will start to swell within minutes after eating even very small amounts of it.

For them, there is scant chance of ever "outgrowing" the allergy. It is too severe, although I know of plenty of instances in which the sensitivity becomes less pronounced as time passes.

Tolerance Develops
What happens is that, naturally, such persons completely avoid the offending foods. Their bodies seem to "get a rest" and, in time may—repeat may—be able to tolerate very, very small amounts of the substance without touching off the allergy.

In such cases, a gradually increasing tolerance is developed, but it can do so only if the amounts are kept small enough so that a new attack of the allergy is not touched off.

This method of giving small amounts, and increasing them very gradually, is used in treating other forms of allergies, too. Take hay fever, for instance. Many victims of it are having such treatments right now, with their doctors giving infinitesimal, but gradually increasing traces of extracts of the plants which cause hay fever. By hay fever, season, the patients should develop a certain tolerance. It is important not to give too big a dose in this process, for then the body's rejection of the offending material suddenly goes into action. Then you have to start over.

The Foxes' Cal Ripken is Appletton's new Babe Ruth league plans to play games about two evenings a week at Plamann park, Apple Creek, according to Bob DeNoble, director of the league and of Appletton's Little league.

An agreement has been reached between Babe Ruth league officials and the Outagamie County Athletic association for the use of the lighted softball field there, reports DeNoble. A low mound (probably six inches high) will be placed on the softball area and the diamond dimensions will, of course, be bigger for the baseball league.

The 4-team league will start play about June 12 and a 14-game schedule for each team is planned. Some games may also be slated for the Little League park at the South Side Athletic club. Games at Plamann park will probably start at 5:45.

The player draft in the circuit was held Wednesday night and 60 players, out of a total of 190, have been assigned to the four clubs. Rosters will be announced soon.

A Babe Ruth league "parents night" will be held at 8 p.m. June 10 in the VFW hall. All parents of players in the league will have a chance to meet managers and coaches and to learn more about the 1960 program.

Youth Bounces Off Curb; Can't Drive

James L. Van Hammond, 17, of 211 W. Tenth street, Kaukauna, cannot drive for the next three months and was charged $2.95 municipal court costs after he admitted Friday that he drove too fast for conditions Sunday.

Van Hammond was charged after he entered Appleton on E. Newberry street, skidded 55 feet into a curb, then 36 feet along the curb before regaining control of his car. Technically, police said, the incident is not a traffic accident.

Racing With Car
Van Hammond, police testified, was racing with another car, which left the scene. Because of his age, no points are charged against Van Hammond's driving record by the state motor vehicle department.

James J. Gehrke, 20, of 1521 N. Appleton street, was fined $50, charged six points and his driver's license was revoked for three months for driving too fast and causing an accident about 2:10 a.m. Friday at Drew street and Wisconsin avenue. Gehrke, police said, tried to turn left from Wisconsin to Drew and his car left 114 feet of tire marks while breaking off the traffic signal post and coming to a halt.

Judge Oscar J. Schmieg held off the 3-month revocation on the condition Gehrke is not arrested for a moving traffic violation again in the next year. Gehrke's past record shows two speeding convictions in 1958 and two property damage accidents last year.

James D. Voss, 19, of 311 E. North street, was fined $40, charged six points and his driver's license was revoked for two months for driving too fast and causing an accident Thursday in the 200 block of S. Oneida street. Voss, police said, failed to round the Oneida street hill curve and hit a utility pole. He received a bump on the head.

Judge Schmieg held off the revocation on the condition Voss is not arrested for a moving traffic violation in the next year.

Opening Peanuts
George H. Lelschow, 46, of 100 Depot street, Manawa, was fined $25 and charged six points for inattentive driving and causing an accident May 2 on Highway 54 in the town of Liberty.

Lelschow was trying to open a bag of peanuts with his teeth, but lost control of his car and rolled it over into a field, police said.

Jonathan W. Rose, 22, Whitefish Bay, denied a reckless driving charge and posted $78.95 bond through his attorney for Sept. 2 trial.

He was charged after he lost control of his sports car at County Trunk KK about a quarter-mile west of Darboy May 17, skidded 54 feet along the road, skidded 48 feet across an intersection and rolled over for 42 feet, seriously injuring a fellow Lawrence student passenger, who was tossed from the car.

Strewed Rubbish
James M. Keldsen, 22, of 206 S. Lawe street, a Lawrence college student driving a college pickup truck, was fined $25 for strewing rubbish over four miles of a town of Greenville road near Highway 45 and 76 County police, notified of the mess by residents, found Keldsen and two companions, who told police they found a dump closed and didn't know what to do with the rubbish. They were told to pick it up.

William J. Nelson, 18, of 209 Jefferson street, Kaukauna, was fined $25 for illegal passing, four points, and $20 for violating restrictions on a temporary permit by driving after dark, two points.

Robert Van Wychen, Green Bay road, Kaukauna, denied allowing Nelson to drive and posted $18.95 bond for trial Wednesday.

Denies Speed
Adolph E. Jeske, 54, of 517 N. Appleton street, denied driving too fast for conditions and posted $28.95 bond for Sept. 2 trial. He was charged after his car ran into the rear of another in a line of cars.

Eastman R. Cornelius, 28, route 2, West De Pere, was fined $35 and charged six points for driving 80 miles an hour in a 45-mile zone.

Charged with no vehicle registration were James R. Clark, 18, 308 E. Washington street, New London, $10 fine; Roland Vollmer, 23, route 1, Bear Creek, $13.95 forfeited; and Harry A. Van Nuland, 46, of 431 Grand avenue, Little Chute, dismissed.

Long Rubbers Avoided By Playing 'Chicago'

BY ALFRED SHELWOLD

"What can we do about long drawn-out rubbers?" asks a reader. "Sometimes we have five or six players in the game, with four playing and the others waiting impatiently on the sidelines. Nobody complains about sitting out for 15 minutes or so, but when

After four hands have been played, the score is added up. There is no rubber bonus, for same bonuses have been given whenever game was bid and made. The lower score is subtracted from the higher, and the winning side is credited with the difference.

New Players

Then the new players come in. If there are only five players, only one comes in. The original cut should have settled the order in which players stay out. The incoming player takes the seat of the first to go out and deals the first hand of the new set of four.

The player to the right of the incoming player changes seats with the player opposite the incoming player. If this schedule is followed until all five players have had a chance to be out, everybody has a different partner each time he plays.

If there are six players, two come in and two go out each time. Not much change of partnership is possible in this arrangement. The name "Chicago" has stuck to the arrangement because the game is said to have originated in that city. There's no proof of this, but a game by any other name would be just as short and sweet.

Strange End Play

Today's hand was played in a game of Chicago at the Cavendish club, where you can't swing a cat without bowling over half a dozen internationally famous players. Declarer zipped through the hand as though it were nothing. The game was so strong that the hand was considered routine, but it would probably be thought a triumph in almost any other company.

South took the first trick in dummy with the ace of hearts, ruffed a heart with a high trump, entered dummy with the eight of spades to ruff another heart with an honor, and got back to dummy with the nine of spades to lead a club.

Now perhaps you were thinking of ruffing clubs in the dummy. This would get you nowhere. You would wind up losing two diamond tricks.

The actual declarer finessed the 10 of clubs from his hand. West won with the queen of clubs and was end-played. If he returned a club or a diamond, South would get a free finesse; and if West returned a heart, South could discard a diamond from dummy and ruff in his own hand. Twelve tricks were sure no matter what West did.

BY EMILY POST

Dear Mrs. Post: I am a single woman with many married friends. They often include me in their parties and ask me to dinner and then to a movie. I can do nothing much in return as I have just a very small place. I feel that I don't want to be a drain on these friends, most of them are struggling to get along. Therefore when we go to the movies I think the least I can do is pay my own way. My offer is always rejected and I don't like to make a scene about it. Many women like myself must be up against this problem. What can I do?

Answer: On occasion buy tickets in advance and invite these friends to go with you.

Two years my son was engaged, he gave his fiancée many presents in addition to the ring. For her hope chest he bought silver and electrical appliances. He also gave her expensive personal gifts such as costume jewelry which she wanted, luggage, etc. She has returned the ring with the explanation that she no longer loves him. What about all the other gifts? Shouldn't they be returned too?

Answer: The silver and electrical appliances for their home-to-be should be returned. The personal items which he gave her for birthdays, Christmas, etc., which she undoubtedly has been using, she may properly keep.

Mothers Given Cheers For Proud Positions

BY ANGELO PATRI

Mothers are engaged for a long course in education that starts when a child is born and as far as I have been able to learn, lasts for a lifetime. This course is supposed to end when a young man or woman marries but this is not always so. They have been known to return for a post-graduate course by telephone if not by class attendance.

At the start the mother teaches the fundamentals of cleanliness, good eating habits, correct toilet habits, and sighs with relief when she sees the success of her efforts in these fundamentals. But the relief is short lived for the next semester is on.

Gets Into Trouble

This child starts getting about and into everything in sight. He falls to rise again; he climbs stairs when he scarcely can balance himself on his feet; he turns on the gas in the stove; he punches every electric button in sight. This means constant watching and very tactful teaching in his essential investigation and their consequent growth of intelligence and power.

Next he talks. He imitates what he hears. He makes odd noises; by and by he stammers; he has stories to tell but lacks words. His mother must listen and let him have all the time he takes to get out his story. At last he talks.

Now he goes from the house to the outdoors to play with his kind. Someone, or it may be he, whacks someone on the head with a shovel. Again the firm casual teaching. "Sorry. The shovel must stay in the closet until you are big enough to know what to do with it."

School Brings Relief

Before mother knows what is happening he is off to school. She has a moment of relief. He comes home with a swagger and orders her to get his lunch right off. He's in a hurry and he may just add a few new words of dramatic force to his order. Again a new semester opens. Again the same firm, patient, casual instruction.

As the child changes in growth and development new problems come and his mother, with occasional aid from his father, must change the course to cover the new subjects. Manners, clean speech, character traits, good habits in daily living, on and on often in great discouragement, often in joy, mothers strive on until the day comes when this child is no longer her charge but his own and showing strength for the course he is to take.

Cheers for the proud position of all mothers. There can be no prouder title than the one she commonly accepts — Housewife and Mother. God bless her.

Angelo Patri offers readers leaflets on a variety of subjects concerning child training. If you would like to have his leaflet "Touching Things," send 10 cents in coin to him, in care of this paper, P.O. Box 99, Station G, New York 19, N. Y.

Your Problems

Child Dictator Holding Reins, Must Learn Lesson With Pains

BY ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN: I'm a young mother who needs help. Opal is my two-year-old daughter. She's very bright for her age and pretty, too. But I can't go any place without her. Opal has aunts and grandmothers who would be happy to stay with her any afternoon or evening, but she won't let me out of her sight. When she sees me putting on a hat or coat she screams, holds her breath, and makes such a fuss that I wind up staying at home. She seems to sense it when I have plans to go somewhere and even though I try to sneak out she catches me and spoils everything.

I haven't had an afternoon away from home in a month. I'm going to lose my mind if I don't get away from the house. Please help me with this problem.—Young Mother Dear Young: If Opal told you to go soak your head in a rain barrel, would you do it? This two-year-old dictator has a pretty good thing going. Unless you establish yourself as the authority in the house, you're going to be in for plenty of grief. Every young mother should have one afternoon a week away from the house. Make arrangements at once for a day off. Tell the child goodbye with an exclamation point at the end of the sentence—not a question mark. Then leave.

DEAR ANN: I'm 14 and have been allowed to attend dances at a teenage center. My girl friend and I have agreed to let our parents take turns driving us down and picking us up. We don't want the kids to know about this as it seems so babyish.

Last evening about 10 minutes before we were supposed to be picked up, a fellow came over and told me my father was standing in the hall with my little sister and brother. He was holding the dog. Well, I almost had a heart attack. I found my girl friend and we tried to sneak out in a hurry but lots of kids saw us anyway.

On the way home I got into a big argument with my father. He says I am all well. Don't you think a girl 14 should be allowed to have some pride? I'm sure all the kids are talking. What do you say about this?—Embarrassed Teen

Dear Embarrassed: So — if the kids are talking what can they be saying? It won't hurt your reputation one bit if the word gets around that you aren't allowed to rattle around by yourself at night and do as you please.

A girl need never be ashamed because her parents have the good judgment and courage to set limits and see that she toes the mark. This sort of "talk" can only add to your standing. Get smart.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a girl 15 and play the clarinet very well. The trouble is, a girl who is better-looking than I am makes goo-goo eyes at the band director and she gets all the solo passages. I only want what's coming to me. Do you think I should report the band leader to the school principal?

—Pushed Aside

Dear Pushed: If you go to the principal with a story like this you'll get what's coming to you alright—and it won't be good.

I can't imagine any place where looks count less and ability counts more than in a school band. Keep practicing and outshine "Goo-Goo Eyes" to the point where it is obvious to all that you are the superior musician.

(Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.) (Copyright 1960)

ONE HOUR MARTINIZING
"I'll give my consent after he has his suit cleaned at ONE HOUR MARTINIZING... and not before!"

Appleton & Little Chute

Family Diary

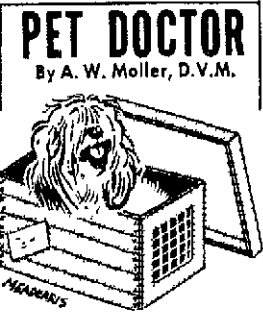

The storm didn't break until sometime during the night on Friday. But, as ominous as it had looked all day, I was surprised it held off so long. In fact, at one point I was so certain it would start pouring before I could get in the ground a hundred odd zinnia seedlings a friend had given me that I almost called over to Mrs. Chiltendon to ask if she'd like some. But I didn't. The fence they installed right after they moved in last fall, as well as their general attitude, has just discouraged neighborliness.

The thought recurred the next morning when John came in from a tour of the yard to report the damage the storm had done. "Things are a mess, but at least it's Saturday. There's nothing we can't clean up or tie up. The real tragedy in the neighborhood is the Chiltendon's blue spruce. It's simply unrooted and lying flat on the ground."

Neighborhood's Joy

I let out a little gasp. That blue spruce is the joy of the neighborhood, even though the Chiltendons aren't. It had been planted, people said, more than 60 years before by the first owner of the house when everything was trees and wild flowers and meadowgrass.

"It brought up a tremendous ball of earth with it," John said, "and with the ground as wet as it is, there's a chance it could be saved."

PET DOCTOR
By A. W. Moller, D.V.M.

Question: We have heard that a health certificate is required before we can ship our dog to another state. Is this true?

Answer: A health certificate is necessary, but some states have more rigid rules than others concerning this. To play it safe, your dog should have his "passport" in order. The procedure is simple. Any licensed veterinarian can give the animal a checkup and issue the health certificate. Most states require proof of rabies inoculation before admittance and this information will be noted on the certificate. If the dog is being shipped to Canada or Mexico, see your veterinarian well in advance of the date of departure as the certificate may have to be approved by your state veterinarian. Should the dog's destination be any other foreign country, the consulate of the country involved can supply you with the necessary requirements.

(Address your question to Dr. Moller in care of this paper. He will answer selected inquiries in his column, but cannot reply to them.)

Neighbors' Labors Have Happy Results

By Jeannette Griffith

he paused, "... if it was anybody's tree but the Chiltendons'." Then he grinned. "I think I'll go over anyway. Even if they did move here from New York City where nobody knows his neighbors, they might be glad for a little help."

A few minutes after John had gotten a length of heavy rope and climbed the fence to the Chiltendons', I decided to follow.

"I wouldn't think of putting you to the trouble," Mr. Chiltendon was saying stiffly as I neared.

"No trouble," John said easily. "At least it's worth a try. And here comes Doc Swanson. He'll lend a hand."

Before John had finished speaking I saw Eve Norris cutting across his back yard, followed by three of his four children. From the other direction came Walter Kelly and Paul Hill, each carrying

7 dogs arrived. Amazingly, though, the gabble we all made ceased and silence fell as John circled the big tree, checked the guide ropes that had been fastened to it and started counting off. "One! Two! Three! Heave! And up we go!"

As, if by magic the great tree, with the strength of a handful of men to guide it, rose from its ignominious sprawl upon the ground, stood upright, tottered for an instant then settled down into the yawning crater that awaited it.

At that very moment Timmy Norris slipped through the enclosing circle and pushed a fat-cheeked baby boy toward John. "Mr. Griffith, I heard you say a little while ago that what you really needed around here was a few more kids," he piped, "so I went and got Bannister, here. He's only a year and a half, and he wets," he added worriedly, "but maybe he'll do."

Mr. Chiltendon's face which had been showing signs of strain broke into a smile that turned into a laugh. The laugh echoed and multiplied, then turned into a cheer as Mrs. Chiltendon—everyone thought she had been demonstrating her disapproval by staying in the house—appeared with great jugs of coffee and milk, and trays of sandwiches and cookies.

It was almost noon before the party broke up. And as fathers, mothers and children started wandering back across the yards toward home everyone agreed that even if the blue spruce doesn't take root and grow again that some fine new friendships will.

Going Places

One Large Suitcase Ends Tourist's Woes

By Shirley and Bob Sloane

It is always with great shuddering and trepidation that we approach the problems of luggage choice and packing, for no other aspect of travel comes in for so much free advice.

Chances are your notions of loading up are wrapped around some vague principles of how to put tissue paper between the folds of a dress and how to turn a suit coat inside out while punching one shoulder into the other the way they do when they put it in a box at the store. Nothing works; everything still comes out like seersucker.

After reading about glamorous new bags that are so light they have to be tied down and so sturdy they have to be beaten to death before you can discard them, you realize that your own luggage consists of an accumulation of unmatched Christmas gifts in various sizes. There are two or three imitation leather grips with the stitching coming apart, one lock broken and the keys missing, and a couple of battle-scarred, plastic-coated fiber bags that make suspicious cracking noises every time you sit on them to get them closed.

Two Basic Patterns

We have two basic patterns for packing that are simple and premised on inexpensive luggage. They are:

1. For auto travel, stay loose.

2. For any other kind, be compact.

Whether you have a big car or a small one, it will be easier to load and more convenient using several pieces of baggage. We carry suits and dresses in an old garment bag hung from the chrome hook in the back seat. Since the bag is not folded, the clothes stay neat, don't fall off the hangers and can easily be removed singly at night without bringing the entire bag to our room for overnight stops.

Saves Toting

When we leave the car in an exposed place for the night, we lay the bag flat in the trunk where it can't be stolen even if anyone knows it's there.

Other items are distributed by the Sloanes

Others in Cellar

We have relegated to the cellar all the various types of fold-over bags with their now-crippled fittings and braces. None of them ever held enough, they were too difficult to dig into, and they didn't prevent wrinkles.

We start packing our big bag by putting shoes and odd-shaped objects, wrapped in plastic sheets and bags where necessary for cleanliness, in the bottom. A layer of soft items not subject to wrinkles—underwear, swim suits and such—comes next, followed by shirts and blouses, also in plastic laundry bags, to even things out. Finally come suits and dresses, on top where they are not subject to creasing—pressure from within.

There is an elasticized compartment for toiletries and other small articles that might be hard to locate elsewhere. Cloth straps hold everything down tightly.

Easy to inspect, load, unload and extract items from with a minimum of groping, it's the best answer we've found to the traveler's universal problem.

Single Huge Bag

For the two of us this almost always means a single huge bag. The type we have chosen is cheap, light, sturdy, roomy and uncomplicated by jagged bars, hangers, compartments, straps and locks. It is 27 inches long and made of nylon reinforced with aluminum on all sides but the top, which is a big zippered flap with a small, simple lock at the end of the zipper.

The overall size is big enough for everything we need for two weeks—which, incidentally, is roughly the same as what we need for five days or five weeks; a little laundry and dry cleaning on the way is the equalizer.

The flap affords flexibility by allowing the bag to be "humped" on top. The length is sufficient for laying flat a man's suit jacket, the ultimate weapon in preventing serious wrinkles. The metal reinforcement makes it stand up under the battering the airlines practice on it, and the inexpensiveness—we paid $17—makes it easily replaceable when its time comes.

The idea of a single bag simplifies keeping track of checked luggage and, though it may be heavy, it is still easier to carry than several lighter bags. It also helps avoid excess baggage charges on the airline.

The road toward the river beckons and you walk slowly, reading words written for some dear one laid to rest long, long ago. A soldier, 1893-1918. Killed in Action at Champagne. You think of all the wars and all the battles, since then, and it seems a very long time ago. A young girl, 1902-1919. Seventeen years old. And the inscription: "Sleep, daughter, dear, and take your rest. God called you home. He thought it best."

From somewhere in another section the air carries the sound of a mower and the succulent scent of newly cut grass. You raise your eyes from the ground to the trees. Everywhere dark evergreens reach out their tender young shoots to the sun and life. A red maple looks vibrant and rich in its new velvet coat.

Two young girls pass you on the road. They walk side by side, silently, carrying bouquets of lily of the valley. A chipmunk with darting eyes sits on the stone base of a monument. Branches move noiselessly on the lifting of a breeze.

"Peace" and "Rest" are the words one sees most often. And as if these existed as tangible things to be called forth by saying their names, you begin to feel a mood of tranquility overcome you. You look at the different ways that people have of remembering—a bed of peonies about to open, a clump of yellow tulips, a newly planted evergreen, red geraniums and white petunias—and you are aware suddenly that everyone who ever lived left a mark of some kind which made him important.

A Smile, a Word

It may have been a smile or a kind word given someone who, because of it, was different to someone else than he might have been. The chain goes from one to another back through the years, keeping us for all our separateness, indissolubly linked together. You watch the river ripple endlessly against the bank and you feel you must weep for all grief, all loss. You are caught up by the swiftness that is life and the eternity that is death and by the knowledge that this time will never return in just the same way. You have this moment. No more.

You turn and go back, thinking that there is another way of remembering also. The mind's recalling a certain laugh, the touch of a hand, or an understanding look. You know that love does not die. In the moment remembered, the beloved is alive.

Thoughts About Memorial Day—

BY JEAN HAMMOND

It is the season when all of nature renews itself. How right that we human beings take a few moments from the strife of living to remember those who strive no more.

Riverside cemetery is beautiful any time, but especially so now. A solitary walk down a quiet gravel road gives evidence everywhere of someone's remembering.

The day is sunny and the air is fresh. Overhead feathery wisps of white trail across a blue sky. Beneath, the lawn is a lush carpet of green. A flicker flashes his red neckband in the sun and a warbler announces himself from somewhere high in an old oak tree.

Protest 1st Game; Jensen, Becker Go Route For St. Mary; Lehman, Johnson Gain Wins

FOX VALLEY CONFERENCE

Friday's Results:
Oshkosh 6-7, St. Mary 5-2.

Oshkosh — St. Mary closed its 1960 baseball season by dropping a doubleheader to Oshkosh 6-5 and 7-2 here Friday afternoon. The twin losses gave the Zephyrs a 5-7 Fox Valley conference record for the year and an overall 5-9 slate.

Coach "Fritz" Heiss protested the first game in the sixth inning when the base umpire twice called a runner out and then called him safe. The tying and winning runs scored shortly thereafter.

The Menashans scored all of their runs on four hits in the third inning of the opener. Oshkosh collected one in the third, three in the fourth and two in the sixth. The big blow was a 2-run triple by "Chuck" Frey, Oshkosh second baseman.

Becker Takes Loss
Bill Becker went the route for St. Mary and allowed five hits. He struck out three and walked three. His mates committed three errors.

Don Lehman hurried for Oshkosh and permitted five hits. He walked five, hit three batters and struck out six. The Indians only made one error.

Frey was the only hitter on either side to come up with more than one safely.

Oshkosh scored three runs on two hits in both the second and fourth innings and added one in the fifth to take a 7-2 decision in the nightcap.

Jensen Goes Route
St. Mary collected singletons in the first and fourth. The losers had a hit in every inning but the sixth and failed

Gain 8-1 Win in Section at Manitowoc; Near State Meet Berth; Shipbuilders Ousted

Manitowoc — Neenah came within one victory of a berth in the state high school baseball tournament by defeating Oakfield 8-1 in its first sectional meet game here Friday afternoon.

The amazing Rockets were scheduled to play Oostburg at 2 p.m. today for that berth in the final field of eight. Oostburg scored a surprising 6-0 win over the host Shipbuilders on a no-hitter by Dick Zengler.

Braun Gets Win
Coach Joe Braun's athletes had a little more breathing room than in their previous three tournament starts, all of which were won by the slim margin of a single run.

Relief pitching again was a strong point for the Red and White. Braun again was forced to employ three pitchers (a starter hasn't gone the route in any of Neenah's games this year), but each time a new one was inserted he proved a capable stopper.

Lefty Mory Handler started out walked the first two men to face him and was pulled out in favor of Bill Braun. The latter worked until the sixth when he walked two and was replaced by Tom Hensen, who finished. Braun picked up the win. In the five innings he worked, he allowed one hit, walked six, struck out five and threw two wild pitches.

Palmer Sell led off, Neenah's first with a walk. He was forced at second by Pete Miller. George Goetz came up with a single. Mitch Miller doubled home Miller. Jim Sauby walked and Don Althaus singled. The latter got all the way to third on an error with Goetz, Miller and Sauby all scoring ahead of him giving Neenah a 4-0 lead.

Add Fifth Run
The Rockets maintained that advantage until the fourth when Braun's hit and successive walks to Fran Goetz, Dan Murphy and Sell produced a run.

Neenah closed its scoring with three in the sixth. The frame included only one hit, a single by Fran Goetz plus a couple of errors and two hits batters.

Three walks and a sacrifice fly gave Oakfield its lone tally in the sixth frame.

Miller and Pete Flury, the losing pitcher, each had a double for the only extra base hits. Althaus with two safeties was the only swinger on either team to come up with more than one.

The Rockets committed one error and Oakfield had three. Neenah had a 6-3 hit advantage.

Saves Star Hurler
In the opening game, Coach Frank Granitz of Manitowoc decided to save his star lefty Ron Vnuk for Saturday's finals but his strategy backfired as the Ships went down before the no-hitter of the Oostburg youth who starred in the Neenah sectional basketball tournament a couple of months ago.

Zuengler struck out 12 and walked five. Al Zipperer started for Manly and Bob Jentsch finished. The Manitowoc fielders committed eight errors. Oostburg scored five of its six runs in the second.

Zuengler was scheduled to pitch against the Rockets today, probably against Handler. The box score:

Macs Clash With Two Formidable Loop Foes

L-C-Kimberly Opponent for Monday Tangle

Menasha — Having had their winning string severed at three by Oshkosh State

Wednesday night, the Menasha Macs will attempt to start another when they face a pair of formidable foes this weekend.

The Fox River Valley league schedule shows them at Kaukauna Sunday afternoon and home to defending champion Little Chute - Kimberly Monday afternoon.

Jim Meyer and Gene Gries are expected to draw the starting mound assignments. Meyer holds both of the Macs' league wins while Gries, in his last two starts, has pitched complete games for St. Norbert college.

He beat Oshkosh State 2-1 last Saturday and the Titans rebounded by smacking the Macs 12-1.

The Macs will be without the services of Jack Konezke, veteran infielder, for about six weeks. He reinjured the knee which had been bothering him for several years.

They will however gain the services of catcher Jerry Koslowski and outfielder Bob Karisny, both of whom played with Oshkosh State against them.

Last season, the Macs coped one of three games against Little Chute and split their two meetings with Kaukauna.

Since there is no holiday weekend softball tournament this year, Monday's contest will be the only athletic contest in the Twin Cities on Memorial day.

Lakeview Nine Bests Foundry

Winners Collect 5 Runs in 1st Frame; Adams Hurls Win

Menasha — Lakeview crushed Neenah Foundry 12-1 in a Twin City Industrial league National division contest Thursday night at Jefferson park.

The second game between Bergstrom Paper and the Marathon Packers was rained out in the second inning.

Lakeview scored five runs in the first inning and added four in the sixth in trimming Foundry. The winners made nine hits and received six walks.

Winning pitcher Len Adams, who held the Foundry to three hits, homered in the fourth with none on. Miller had a bases-empty clout for the victors in the seventh.

Adams struck out nine, including the slide twice.

List Hints For Cooks

Oshkosh — Try using various seasonings or sauces on vegetables besides salt. For an easy sauce with asparagus, broccoli or cauliflower, try this recipe for "easy hollandaise" sauce.

Mix one-half cup mayonnaise, two tablespoons lemon juice, two teaspoons prepared mustard. Heat over hot water. Pour over vegetables and serve at once.

Miss Lois Klusmeyer, county home agent, has listed a recipe for lemon butter. The recipe requires one - fourth cup butter, three tablespoons lemon juice and one-half teaspoon paprika. Melt butter, add lemon juice and paprika. Serve with freshly cooked asparagus, cauliflower, broccoli and carrots. A variation might be omitting the paprika and adding one-half cup slivered toasted almonds to the butter.

When you are using a pressure cooker, never put the indicator weight on the vent pipe until you have locked the cover in place and exhausted all the air from the cooker. Never remove the indicator weight until the stem returns to "down" position.

Graduation Gifts He'd Like Sports Car, Will Receive Check

Neenah — "He would like a sports car, but he's getting a check for $25," the mother of a graduating senior said laughingly, "Of course he doesn't really expect the car, but it never hurts to ask."

Gifts preferred by Twin City graduates cover a wide selection, ranging from portable radios, cameras and typewriters to collegiate dictionaries, books and technical equipment.

Wristwatches for dress wear are less popular than those with a practical steel case, shockproof and self-winding. Girls going into nursing want watches with an easily read dial, and of course a sweep second hand. Boys want watches that will take hard, daily use.

Luggage is another useful and welcome gift for graduates going on to college. "We feel that a graduation present from high school is unnecessary — we expect him to graduate — but he must have luggage and this is a good time to give it to him."

Careful with Clothes

Many of the girls would rather have money for clothes than a specific gift. "They have such definite ideas about what they want," one mother observed. "It saves everybody's time to let them buy their own gift."

One girl is receiving a pearl given her mother many years ago, which is being set in a ring. "She has admired it since she was a little girl and we think she will be pleased and surprised."

Several mothers agreed that boys were less definite than girls when asked what they would like, and many parents said that their sons and daughters do not ask for anything and will appreciate whatever they are given.

"Today, more than ever, graduation from high school is taken for granted and, except as a remembrance to mark the occasion, a 'reward' as such, is not expected." This seemed to be the consensus of opinion.

Trappist Monk From Hong Kong To be Speaker

Menasha — Court Allouez, Catholic Daughters of America, and friends of the Far East Trappists are sponsoring a program Tuesday evening to meet a Chinese trappist from Hong Kong.

The Very Rev. Dom Paulinus Lee will be at the Knights of Columbus clubhouse in Menasha at 8 p.m. Tuesday. He will show pictures of the monastery, Our Lady of Joy, Lantau island, Hong Kong and explain the work that has been accomplished by their order in that area.

The program is open to the public.

Pack Gives Awards

Menasha — Twenty members of Cub Scout pack 50, St. Mary church, received awards at this month's meeting. Seven den chief cards were presented.

Paper Plates Used for These Games for Hikes or Picnics

When you go hiking, take some paper plates along and hold a discus-throwing contest. If you think it is easy to throw a paper plate so it will land just where you want it, to you have a surprise coming.
Place something on the ground to represent the target. Pace off 20 feet from the target and mark the spot where each plate thrower is to stand. One by one, the players take turns. Each tries to throw his plate so it will land on the target and stay there. The winner is the player whose plate lands nearest the target.
After all have had one turn and the winner has been determined by measuring the distances between all the plates and the target, try again. You will find most of the player so surprised to have landed so far away from the target they will be eager to try time after time.
Another paper-plate game is illustrated in the drawing above. In this stunt each player has a plate. The players stand in a circle. At a signal, each one tosses his plate to the player to his right. This means each player must also quickly turn to his left and try to catch the plate his neighbor has tossed at him. Fast action is required!
For another stunt the players form a circle with one in the middle to act as "teacher." The teacher has a plate. Surveying the players in the circle, he suddenly tosses his plate to one of them. The player must catch it in order to remain in the circle. If he misses, he becomes the teacher and the first teacher joins the circle.

Creator of Famed Uncle Sam Poster Dies in New York

New York — J. M. Montgomery Flagg, a giant among America's illustrators, is dead at 82.

The peppy, outspoken artist whose World War I recruiting poster created a new vision of Uncle Sam, died at his Manhattan home yesterday. He had long been ill and was nearly blind.

In his peak during the first quarter of the century, Flagg's name was synonymous with the drawings of beautiful women that brought him a reputation of authority on pulchritude.

But of all his drawings his best known was the dignified, stern-faced Uncle Sam, pointing a compelling finger and declaring "I Want You." The poster gave an immeasurable boost to World War I enlistments and four million copies were printed. It was revived in World War II. The original is now in the Smithsonian institution.

Until that poster, Uncle Sam had been depicted as gangling, austere, rustic figure.

Seven Die As Omaha House Burns

Omaha — Seven persons died and five others were burned early today in a fire that roared through a 3-story Omaha apartment house. Eight families lived in the building.

Firemen said the blaze apparently started on the second floor of the frame structure, trapping persons in their beds. The blaze raged out of control nearly an hour.

Neighbors in the area said they were awakened by screams of trapped persons for aid. Douglas county hospital said it had received seven bodies, five of them children.

Firemen said when they reached the scene the upper two floors of the building were a raging inferno. It was not immediately determined how the fire started.

Firemen said about 30 persons were in the building at the time. Some escaped via fire escapes and others went to roofs and were taken down by ladder.

Free Trip to Europe

Oconto Falls Honors Essay Winner, Post-Crescent Columnist House

Oconto Falls — This small village went "all out" Friday in a unique celebration in honor of Press-Gazette and Post-Crescent columnist Charles House and its own Victor Bast, whose essay won the coveted free trip to Europe. The contest was sponsored by this newspaper.

The populace of Oconto Falls and neighborhood turned out enthusiastically to celebrate the first of three Vic Bast-Charles House days while merchants and members of the Oconto Falls Businessmen association donned old time regalia and held vigorous sidewalk sales.

Program chairman A. L. (Bud) Soulek termed the first day's activities "a grand success and a credit to the people of our town."

House spent the full day in Oconto Falls visiting with merchants and chatting on the streets and in the stores with local citizens and hundreds who came to observe the festivities.

Five hundred school children from local and rural schools in the region assembled in the high school gymnasium to hear Charlie House discuss his travels via canoe from Montreal to Oshkosh.

A similar talk will be made to adults Saturday when the adventurous newspaperman will speak again on behalf of Bast. Admission charge will be made and the entire sum will be turned over to the Oconto Falls teacher, a former fighter pilot of World War II. The proceeds are expected to enable the popular educator to take his wife to Europe on the Press-Gazette and Post-Crescent sponsored tour which begins July 10.

The day-long celebration Friday commenced with a parade which rolled through town with the shrieking and snorting provided by a 1904 steam-driven threshing machine owned by Ray April.

Climax Sunday In the parade were horses and buggies, a 1912 model T Ford and other ancient vintage vehicles. House and Bast rode in House's famed canoe, the Green Apple, which was perched atop the city fire truck. The parade was guided by the Oconto Falls High school band and was led by Parade Marshal Thomas McDougal.

Several hundred out-of-town seniors will take part in a skit. They are Bartmann; Franklin Bacheller and June Schroeder; Appleton; Karen Helms, route 1, West De Pere; Jean Bouschard, Green Bay, and Joyce Huebner, route 1, Fremont.

Ronald Schmidt, Appleton, class president, will present the class gift, an electric spirit duplicator machine, to the school. He also will read the class prophecy.

Ten senior members of the band will provide music for the program.

The school annual, "Cross and Crown," will be distributed by Dallas Arndt, Neenah, one of the editors.

The following route 3 areas will receive mounted route delivery:

N. Oneida street from Highway 41 to Capitol drive.

N. Morrison street from 3000 to 3300 block.

The 3300 block of N. Division street.

West Park Ridge from Oneida to Division streets.

Sunset avenue from Oneida to Richmond streets.

Capitol drive from Division to Richmond streets.

The 100 blocks of E. Second and E. Capitol drive.

Mounted delivery also will begin on E. Newberry street from the Appleton city limits to Kimberly city limits, which includes the 1900 to 3200 blocks.

The newly acquired facility has a yard completely fenced, surfaced, lighted with mercury vapor lamps. There are 78 large loading doors with three steel transfer bays and a 20,000-pound electric traveling crane, all roofed. The 350 by 81 foot dock is completely covered.

Lyneis had just recently returned to work after a 6-month recovery from another injury. He had broken his legs several other times.

The car Lyneis was driving collided with one driven by Henry P. De Bruin, 23, of 1621 N. Morrison street.

Lyneis was taken to St. Elizabeth hospital by Larry's ambulance.

towners visited Oconto Falls to attend the festivities, according to Sterling Bauman of Bauman's Clothing store. "At least 150 strangers wandered in the store, today," he said, "partly to meet Charlie House and partly to congratulate Vic Bast on his winning of the trip to Europe with Charlie. The day was a huge success."

The celebration in honor of the local boy who made good in the contest, which attracted thousands of entrees, will continue through Sunday and reach its climax with an old-fashioned parade sponsored by the Jaycees.

Legislature Okays New Spending Bills

But Brunt of Providing Money Is Passed on to Successors

BY JOHN WYNGAARD
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Madison — The state legislature's ingenious politicians Friday invented a new method for the ancient art of politics when they passed spending bills with price tags to be submitted to their successors.

"This is about as cynical a piece of business as writing a check when you know you have insufficient funds to cover," protested Sen. Robert P. Knowles of New Richmond, assistant GOP leader in the senate, but his complaint went unheeded.

Political Appeal
Only six senators voted against a bill promising to triple state subsidies for 61 local vocational schools containing a provision that the money won't actually be paid until July of 1961.

That means that lawmakers and the governor to be elected next fall will be held accountable for the generous gesture of the present legislature and administration.

The legislature approved other appropriation bills with the same conditions, because the present treasury situation doesn't permit expansion of an already record-high budget and legislators fear to boost the level of state taxes.

Meaning Of Move
But the political appeal was in the vocational aid bill, as shown by the way it was whopped through the Democratic assembly and got the majority support of the Republican-controlled upper house which has been keeping up a drum-fire of criticism of the Nelson regime's spending record.

The practical meaning of the maneuver is that the next governor and the next legislature will find it impossible to refuse to provide the new money.

The bill provides for an increase in total aids of about $1,800,000. Vocational school officers and members of the state vocational school staffs attended legislative sessions last week, lobbying for the enactment.

'Promissory Notes'

At one point the assembly in an extraordinary motion recessed for three minutes to permit Director C. L. Greiber of the state department of vocational education to advocate enactment of the bill. Nobody proposed that opponents be heard also.

Some legislators privately wondered why such an inviting means of vote-courting hadn't been thought of during 100 preceding years of legislative history.

But Sen. W. A. Draheim of Neenah, a fiscal watchdog for the Republicans spoke with vehement scorn.

He denounced the deferred financing plan as the product of the "political incubator in the executive office," and said Gov. Nelson who had endorsed the bill "is trying to buy votes with promissory notes."

The vocational school lobby has appealed for years for more state support to supplement its independent local taxing powers, but the legislature turned it aside time and again during the years of substantial treasury surpluses.

Boaters Warned Of River Danger

Weekend boaters have been advised by authorities to stay clear of the water above and near the dams in the Fox river due to strong currents. All dam gates have been opened to handle the high water.

The Greensward on the River bank below Memorial union furnished a picturesque setting for the final drill of AFOTC detachment 935 at Lawrence college. The long line of cadets in the center of the photo were the men decorated for particular distinction in the program. The group at the left is composed of civilian and military guests who presented awards. The AFOTC program now is on a voluntary basis at the college. The drill was the final one witnessed by Col. Albert L. Betz, professor of air science and tactics, who has been transferred to duties at the Pentagon.

Olson Contracts for Advertising Services

Friends Say He's Not Sure He Can Finance Independent Campaign

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

Madison—Jack Olson, Wisconsin Dells, who says he is considering whether to run for the Republican nomination for governor in the September primary election, has contracted for advertising services during August, it was reliably reported here last night.

The disclosure came from a close political associate of the tourist promoter who withdrew from the Republican state convention endorsement contest a week ago with the statement that he may challenge in the primary the backing of the regulars for Philip Kuehn, of Milwaukee. Olson thus far has confined his public comments to the statement that he will make a final decision about his candidacy within a few weeks.

Legislators friendly to him have the impression that he is not sure that he can finance an independent campaign. They say he wants pledges of at least $50,000 from supporters.

Opposes Kuehn

Olson has also let it be known that he would have supported any of several other candidates for the nomination, but that he is opposed to Kuehn, former party chairman and a cold storage warehouse owner. He continues to complain that the party or-

Clammy Day Starts Holiday In Fox Cities

By mid-morning today there was no sign of the ideal holiday weather promised by the weatherman, but he is still holding out hope things will clear up. However, he coped his bet on that "clear-up" by indicating possibilities of scattered thundershowers Sunday.

Perhaps the best advice is to stay home and make plans for next Memorial day. There is one consolation, if it can be called that. Many other sections of the nation were worse off than the gloomy, clammy Fox Cities.

Thunderstorm activity increased its tempo over the plains states and included a tornado or two. At the same time, storm activity raked much of the south with heavy hail and rain and a couple of twisters there, too.

The real holiday weather was limited to the fringes of the nation, with fair and mild weather reported in New England, Florida and California.

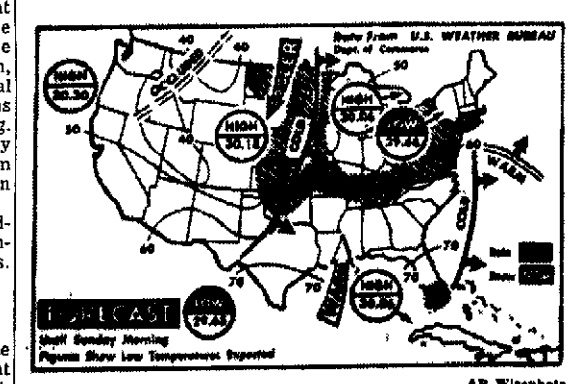

Youth Gets Cut Lip In Car-Truck Crash

Fremont — A Milwaukee youth suffered a cut lip in an accident involving a semi and a car pulling a boat trailer here about 8:45 a.m. today.

Wayne Budde, 19, a passenger in a car driven by Robert Budde, 47, his father, was injured.

Police said Budde was traveling southwest on Highway 10 and turned left into the path of the semi. Robert Allen, 22, Indianapolis, Ind., the truck driver, was unhurt.

Dam. He also served in the company's office at Clintonville.

Occasional Rain or Drizzle is forecast for tonight for Connecticut with scattered showers or thundershowers in parts of the middle Atlantic states, Ohio and Tennessee valleys, southern Florida, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, the Dakotas, Nebraska and Oklahoma. It will be cooler in South Carolina, the Dakotas, Nebraska, Kansas and Oklahoma and slightly warmer in Minnesota, Iowa and Missouri.

Nikita Flays Ike; Reveals No Top Fight

Soviet leader has taken public notice of western reports of dissension in the highest party hierarchy.

In a 3-hour talk which he broke with a 20-minute rest period, Khrushchev presented these main points:

The May Day U2 flight: "Treachery committed by the U.S. government." The creation of a new Soviet rocket that Khrushchev said downed the high-flying Lockheed craft has undermined the entire U.S. military bomber strategy.

U. S. Responsibility
Summit conference: "The United States bears responsibility before the whole world" for collapse of the Big Four Paris meeting. . . . There was a slap at Bonn also—"Backstage activities of the West German government did everything to wreck the summit conference or render it sterile." . . . Khrushchev will be disappointed if there is not a new summit conference in six or eight months, but not surprised. . . . An Eisenhower apology for the U2 flight is still a precondition. . . . Red China, India, Indonesia and possibly some other nations should take part in any future summit meeting.

Resubmit Charge
United Nations—Defeated in the Security Council, the Soviet Union is going to submit to the General Assembly its charge of aggression by the United States. . . . "The majority of the Security Council could not pronounce a just verdict. How could the pirates be judged by those who themselves were pirates?"

Disarmament — The Soviet Union will resume nuclear tests if the United States does

... "I want to warn that the renewal of nuclear explosions will lead to our renewing such nuclear tests in the interest of our security and that of our allies. I stress that we do not want such a development. I repeat once again that we are ready to carry on honest negotiations on disarmament."

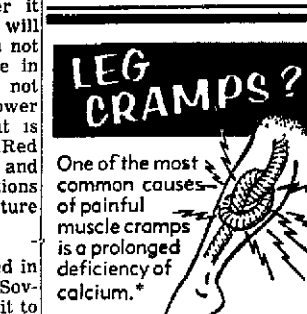

Turkish Situation

Turkey — In a reference to U.S. military bases there: "The government which was overthrown yesterday did not promote the betterment of relations with the Soviet Union. . . . We have been striving for better relations with Turkey for a long time."

Japan — The Russians will deal a shattering blow at U.S. bases in Japan if those bases are used for spy flights over the Soviet Union. . . . The newly concluded U.S.-Japan military pact was described as directed against the U.S.S.R. and its great friend, China.

Correction

Memorial day services at Hortonville High school will be at 9:30 a.m. Monday, not Sunday as stated in Friday's Post-Crescent.

LEG CRAMPS?

One of the most common causes of painful muscle cramps is a prolonged deficiency of calcium.

So says a famous doctor and widely-read newspaper columnist, formerly with the Mayo Clinic, and other well-known health authorities

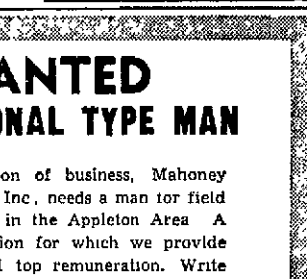

When meals, consistently deficient in calcium, are fortified with DYNAL-CAL Calcium Tablets, tormenting calcium-deficient muscle cramps can be promptly relieved. But don't confuse DYNAL-CAL Tablets with ordinary calcium-phosphorus products. DYNAL-CAL contains no phosphorus which frequently interferes with the absorption of calcium. And DYNAL-CAL Tablets contain a special ingredient which helps to put calcium into the blood stream quicker—bringing faster relief to cramping, calcium-starved muscles. Pleasant-tasting DYNAL-CAL Tablets with calcium, glutamic acid hydrochloride, and vitamins D and C contain no drugs. They are safe, harmless, calcium food supplements. If you are suffering miserable muscle cramps, and suspect you are not getting enough calcium, ask for DYNAL-CAL Tablets, today. Bottles of 90 tablets, $1.50.

*After cases for muscle cramps are mailed, return to this office.
